AGENDA & PROGRAM

Jim Blackburn presents and discusses his personal experiences as a former federal prosecutor, a lawyer in private practice, and the successes and failures of both, with specific details of the mistakes that led to the surrender of his license to practice law in North Carolina.

As a former prosecutor, the speaker dealt regularly with ethics issues and the seminar will contain a general discussion of recent ethical issues, both in the Jeffrey MacDonald murder case and other prosecutorial matters in North Carolina. Lawyers and professionals want to know about depression and how to recognize and deal with it, both with themselves and their associates and friends. Having experienced major depression first hand, and its consequences, Blackburn will talk frankly about those times.

Jim Blackburn, former NC Special Deputy Attorney General, First Assistant United States Attorney for Eastern NC, US Attorney. Blackburn served as lead prosecutor in the trial of Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, who was accused of murdering his pregnant wife and two daughters. Blackburn was disbarred in 1993 for violating ethics rules, and continues to share his story and teaching CLE.
