Lower Limb Pain and its Clinical Implications

The purpose of this event is to present current thinking on the treatment and management of lower limb pain. It will draw on various clinical and related disciplines that have a major input in the management of lower limb pain.

The aim of the symposium is to offer an overview of the theory of pain and explore how this is treated and managed in the clinical setting.

The objectives are to:

- Describe and explain the current models of pain
- Gain an insight into the complexity of pain management
- Assess the importance of the management of pain in various clinical settings
