

Welcome to the Tenth Annual Hawaii International Conference on Social Sciences

Aloha!

We welcome you to the Tenth Annual Hawaii International Conference on Social Sciences. This event offers a rare opportunity for academics and other professionals from around the world to share their broad array of perspectives. True to its primary goal, this conference provides those with cross-disciplinary interests related to social sciences to meet and interact with others inside and outside their own discipline.

The international attendees to this conference bring a variety of viewpoints shaped by different cultures, languages, geography and politics. This diversity is also captured in the Hawaii International Conference's unique cross-disciplinary approach. The resulting interaction energizes research as well as vocation.

With Waikiki Beach, Diamond Head and the vast South Pacific as the backdrop, this venue is an important dimension of this conference. For centuries a stopping place of explorers, Hawaii has historically been enriched by the blend of ideas that have crossed our shores. The Hawaii International Conference on Social Sciences continues this tradition in the nurturing spirit of Aloha. Along with its ideal weather and striking beauty, the Hawaiian Islands provide natural elements to inspire learning and dialogue.

The 2010 conference was a great success. We hosted more than 200 participants representing more than 15 countries. Thank you for joining the 2011 Hawaii International Conference on Social Sciences!

The 2012 Hawaii International Conference on Social Sciences will be held May 30 – June 2, 2012 at the Waikiki Beach Marriot Resort & Spa in Honolulu, Hawaii. Please check our website in early July for more details!

Hawai‘i – The Legacy of Literacy

From ancient times, Polynesia was made up of oral societies, and systems of writing did not develop until regular contact with western civilizations had continued for years. In Hawai‘i, it was in the 1820s, more than four decades after the coming of Captain Cook, that missionaries and Hawaiian scholars reduced the spoken language to a consistent written form. From that point on, with the active support of both chiefs and commoners, reading and writing bloomed throughout the islands. In less than two generations, Hawai‘i had achieved near-universal literacy – higher than America and most of Europe at the time. Hawaiian was the language of the Hawaiian kingdom and most of the population in the islands through the 19th and into the 20th century.

In the course of just over 100 years, Hawaiians generated the equivalent of nearly two-million pages of printed material, an archive that documents the world of the time, locally and globally. This body of material includes accounts of historical and current events from each period. It is also a treasury of chants, songs, and legends from the oral tradition, along with contemporary compositions, personal and public correspondence, speeches, and family histories. Most of these materials were published in over one hundred different Hawaiian-language newspapers that were in print between 1834 and 1948.

While Hawaiian history has been assembled utilizing languages from every part of the world, most of the materials written and published in Hawaiian have been left out of the accords. Less than two percent of the entire Hawaiian-language archive has been translated and published, and little is accessible to researchers or readers today. The picture is changing, however, with the advent of new technology fueling a decades-long movement to revitalize the language. Those two forces are opening up the dusty archival collections and bringing valuable knowledge to light.

Dr. Puakea Nogelmeier has taught Hawaiian language at the University of Hawai‘i for 25 years and has trained for decades in traditional language and literature. His work focuses on the rearticulation of historical Hawaiian knowledge into fields of study today.

Ms. Kau‘i Sai-Dudoit is a researcher and historian. She has been the Director of Ho‘olaupa‘i, the Hawaiian Newspaper Resource since its inception in 2002. Ho‘olaupa‘i was created to generate access to the Hawaiian newspaper repository and expand awareness about the historical importance of that archive.
