SCHOOL OF RESOURCE AND ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT SIMON FRASER UNIVERSITY

MASTERS LEVEL DIRECTED STUDIES COURSE REM 664-5 or 665-5

This course provides an opportunity for customized studies related to the student's interests. The directed studies course may focus specifically on aspects of the student's REM 699 research project—including researching and writing components of the 699 report—or may focus on other topics of interest to the student. The outcome of the course should be a significant tangible product, such as an annotated bibliography, substantial research paper, or draft chapter of the student's 699 project. All proposed Directed Studies courses require the approval of the supervising faculty member and the REM Chair of Graduate Studies. Students should begin discussing the proposed study with the supervising faculty member at least one month before the registration period for the semester. Directed Studies courses are marked using the normal grading standards for REM courses. Students are allowed to take only two Directed Studies courses for credit towards their REM degree (both courses may be taken in the same semester and both may be supervised by the same faculty member).

Before registering in a directed studies course, the student must:

- Prepare and submit to the supervising faculty member a course outline describing the work to be completed and the deadlines.
- Submit the approved course outline and this form to the REM Graduate Administrator for review and approval by the Chair of Graduate Studies.

1. Student's Name
2. SFU Student Number
3. Directed Studies Supervisor
4. Indicate whether you are registering in RI (second directed studies course): REM (	EM 664 (first directed studies course) or REM 665 664 REM 665
5. Semester and course outline for Directed	Studies (please attach)
We recommend that as outlined, and that upon successful completowards the degree.	be allowed to take the Directed Studies Course etion of the course should be granted 5 credit hours
 	Date
Instructor for course
	Date
Senior Supervisor

When this form has been completed, please return it to the Graduate Program Assistant who will obtain the signatures and complete the paperwork to have the appropriate faculty member record your grade.