

Newsletter October 2004

BBUG meetings are on the 1st Wednesday of each month, except January. Next meeting: 7.30pm Wednesday 6th October at Swinburne, Hawthorn Campus, TD building (between Park and Wakefield Streets) room TD246. Prior to the meetings some BBUG members meet for dinner at 6pm at the Sara Pizza House, 659 Glenferrie Road, Hawthorn. – all are welcome to join us there.

The Boroondara Bicycle Users' Group (BBUG) is a voluntary group working to promote the adoption of a safe and practical environment for community and recreational cyclists in the City of Boroondara. We have close links with the City of Boroondara, Bicycle Victoria, Bicycle Federation of Australia and other local Bicycle Users' Groups.

BBUG has a web site at <http://home.vicnet.net.au/~bदारabug/boroondarabug.htm>

that contains interesting material related to cycling, links to other cycle groups and recent BBUG Newsletters.

We also have two Yahoo Groups:

Send a blank e-mail to BoroondaraBug-subscribe@yahoogroups.com to receive this monthly newsletter and occasional important messages.

Send a blank e-mail to BoroondaraBugDiscussion-subscribe@yahoogroups.com to monitor or join in an ongoing discussion of bike related issues both local and general.

All articles in this newsletter are the views and opinions of the authors and do not necessarily represent the views of any other members of BBUG. All rides publicised in this newsletter are embarked upon at your own risk.

Letter to Progress Leader

Dear Readers.

This morning I was delighted to find in my letterbox a note from the City Council, advising that Council will use VicRoads funds to extend the Principal Bicycle Network through Boroondara, including bike lanes right past my door in Mont Albert Road.

I've had the pleasure of travelling along Balwyn Road, by both bike and car, numerous times since the new bike lanes appeared. As a cyclist I appreciate the safety and security of a small section of dedicated roadspace, relieving me of the need to constantly check my rear view mirror as I weave around parked cars. As a motorist I appreciate the safety and security of travelling in a clearly defined lane exactly one car wide, whereas I used to feel a bit lost in a lane almost, but frustratingly not quite, two cars wide.

As a resident of Mont Albert Road I eagerly await the proposed lane markings which will discipline speeding traffic and help the numerous cyclists who daily pass my door. Bike lanes right outside our home might even encourage my family to cycle more, replacing some of our car use with a healthier mode of travel. Remember that every bike means one less car, which means less congestion, so motorists can reach destinations more quickly and safely, and be more likely to find a parking spot when you get there.

Yours sustainably.

Philip Crohn.

Denmark: Cyclist Heaven

After completing two weeklong bicycle tours in Denmark, one in North Zealand and the other in Southern Funen, I am convinced that it is the most bicycle friendly country in the world. (It's pretty good for pedestrians and public transport users as well!) The terrain is flat to undulating so not too taxing, and there is lots of attractive farmland, forest and coastline, as well as castles, historic buildings and quaint medieval villages galore. But it is the cycling facilities and the acceptance of cyclists' presence that is the most striking aspect of riding in Denmark, at least to a cycling advocate.

All the Danish cities and towns of any size that we visited have extensive pedestrian only areas. Cycling is generally prohibited in these areas during the main shopping periods, but there are lots of bike parking racks in them, as there are in all other public areas such as stations, parks, beaches, etc.

There are also some motorways in Denmark where cycling is not permitted at all. However many main roads, through and between towns, have cycle paths on both sides that are a cross between a bicycle lane and an off-road path. Cyclists are allocated a dedicated space between the road and the footpath, on a level between these and divided from them, usually by rows of cobblestones. While the footpath is usually a mixture of pavers and cobblestones the bike path is bitumen so there is also visual differentiation between them. The bike path is usually quite wide enough for overtaking. Car access to properties is provided, not as in Australia by concrete driveways, but by unobtrusive bitumen infills at each of the two small steps, from footpath to bike path and bike path to road.

At controlled intersections cyclists must do a hook turn as in Melbourne's CBD. Often their path across each part of the intersection is painted blue making it clear to all road users that this is bike territory. Roundabouts generally have a bicycle lane marked around them, again signalling the likely presence of cyclists to motorists. In the course of our tours we rode over several large, high bridges quite comparable with Westgate. But unlike Westgate these bridges had bicycle paths on each side.

Of course even in Denmark these wonderful bike paths do not cover the entire country without interruption. There were times when the bike path finished and we had to ride on roads with bike lanes like those on our roads, or even without. There were also times when there was a two-way bike path on one side of the road only, in which case there were always well-signed crossings to get to and from it. Occasionally we had a narrow path marked on the footpath. For many sections of our tours we rode on narrow back roads that carried very little traffic and had no markings of any sort, or on unsealed forest tracks.

In two weeks of cycling on Danish roads I was never once tooted or shouted at by a motorist, despite the fact that I made many mistakes riding an unfamiliar bike on the wrong side of the road. (I was rebuked more than once by another cyclist!) Nor was I ever overtaken at uncomfortably close range or at uncomfortably high speed by a car.

The Danish government has spent vast sums of money in the last few years signing and improving thousands of kilometres of numbered bicycle routes that cobweb the entire country. These routes also link up with routes through neighbouring countries. Various maps and guides are available to help cyclists follow them.

I didn't transport a bike by train while I was in Denmark. However I did travel extensively by train and observed that Danish trains have a generous amount of space for bikes and other luggage, and indeed for passengers. Carriages with space for bikes are clearly marked on the outside. I also saw bikes transported on buses.

And what is the outcome of all this consideration for cyclists in Denmark? To borrow a good phrase from BV 'more people cycling more often'. Cyclists of all ages and both sexes are everywhere to be seen in Denmark, in the cities, the towns and even on country roads. It was actually possible to be riding along a back road and to be passed and overtaken by several cyclists before a single car appeared. You see just as many people arriving at supermarkets on bikes to do their shopping as by car.

Denmark's wonderful cycling facilities also attract masses of cycle tourists in the summer. Apart from the people of many different nationalities who shared our Bike Denmark self-guided tours I saw hoards of independent cycle tourists with well-laden bikes, including many family groups. Those I spoke to came mainly from Holland or Germany. Often the courtyards of our hotels were crammed with bikes.

Perhaps I am prejudiced but it seemed to me that Denmark's towns, cities and roads were much quieter, less congested and more peaceful places than our own. The pace of life seemed slower and people seemed calmer. Huge, ugly car parks were less a feature of the landscape. There seemed to be fewer obese people and the cyclists we encountered were certainly a fit bunch. I was always being overtaken by riders who looked not the slightest bit athletic but whose leg muscles had obviously benefited from a lifetime of regular exercise.

As a rule I question the need for politicians to go gallivanting off overseas but I wouldn't mind some of my tax dollars being used to send some of our politicians to Denmark to study their methods of encouraging cycling. It's a real eye-opener!

Help Needed by COTA

G'day folks

Bicycle Victoria has been approached by the Council of the Ageing (COTA) asking if we can encourage a number of cyclists to ride from the State Library to the City Square with the state Minister for Aged Care, Gavin Jennings, leading the ride.

This ride, on Friday 1 October (around lunchtime - time to be confirmed), is being run as part of the Share Your Passion (<http://www.cotavic.org.au/IDOP%20Publisher%20poster1.pdf>) event which itself is part of the celebrations around the International Day of Older People. COTA are looking for riders aged 50+ who want to 'share their passion' by riding as part of this event.

Our question for you and your members (aged 50+) is would you be interested and available to attend this event? This would be a great way for your members to share their passion for riding, and spread the "It can be done" message to other older people looking for ways to get active. (If a three block ride sounds a little short, then why not make it part of a longer club ride before or after this event?)

If you are interested in sharing your passion could you let me know the number of club members that are likely to attend.

News from Neighbouring BUGs

Yarra BUG

Yarra BUG has organised a stall at the Bicycling Australia Show at the Exhibition Building on Saturday 23rd – Sunday 24th October. They will be located at stall no. C9 with other BUG's and Clubs. They have kindly invited Melbourne BUG and Boroondara BUG to share their stall. BBUG has accepted this offer and agreed to make a small financial contribution. We will be re-vamping our publicity flyer for the occasion. So far Julia Blunden has volunteered to help staff the stall 3-5pm 23/9. If anyone else can help please let us know.

Great Victorian Bike Ride Sponsorship

As we have not been able to identify an individual student to sponsor for the Great Victorian Bike Ride we have decided to assist a school group instead. The School in question is Macleod Secondary College. Jan Bourke who rides with the Camberwell Downhill Gourmet Riders is one of the school staff accompanying students on the GVBR. BBUG will give $200 to assist with costs getting the students to and from the ride. In return the students will write a diary of the ride which we hope to include in this newsletter in due course.

Minutes of Boroondara BUG Meeting Thursday 9th September 2004

Venue: Swinburne Room TD246

Present: Graeme Stone, Phil Crohn, David Leong, Jason den Hollander, Graham Ellis, Alan Brittain, Julia Blunden

Guests: Duncan McGregor, Chairman Whitehorse Bicycle Advisory Committee; Damon Rao, Travelsmart Project Officer

Apologies: Rosemary West

1. Travelsmart Maps: Damon Rao distributed copies of the first two Travelsmart maps, those of Inner Melbourne and Darebin, and explained the method of preparation and the philosophy behind the maps. Areas are selected for the Travelsmart program on the basis that public transport is underused and the local council is interested in doing something about this. The Maps are based on Melway and include on and off road bike routes and walking routes as well as public transport information. Maps to be produced over the next six months include several inner suburban areas including Boroondara.

Damon requested input from BBUG on cycling routes in Boroondara. BBUG members present were extremely impressed with the quality of the maps and keen to see the Boroondara map go ahead. GS, PC, DL, JD and JB agreed to provide information for their respective areas. Given her extensive experience of riding in the area it was suggested that Rosemary West be asked if she would be willing to contribute. It was agreed to meet at PC's place at 8pm on Wednesday 15/9 to combine all contributions onto a single map supplied by Damon.

2. Whitehorse Bicycle Advisory Committee: Duncan McGregor explained the structure and functioning of the Whitehorse BAC, which has been set up to advise council on cycling issues and receives an annual budget from council to cover expenses. There are about 10 regular attendees including one council staff member. Some of the BAC's successes include the completion of the Bushy Creek Trail, which links to a route along Springfield Road, and the Gardiners Creek extension. One useful strategy employed by the BAC has been to introduce resident feedback cards at bike shops.

However Duncan went on to list some of the failures and frustrations experienced by the committee. He attributed some of these at least to the restrictions imposed by the status of the BAC as a committee of council, suggesting that a BUG such as ours has greater freedom to put pressure on council.

Duncan outlined future plans, which include a tent at the Whitehorse Spring Festival and possibly getting Whitehorse councillors and council staff out for a ride in the area. Deakin University was cited as a concern and it was suggested that Duncan could liaise with Annie Malesic on this subject. Duncan asked for suggestions for books on cycle activism and Damon and PC suggested a number of titles.

Other Items dealt with very briefly included:

3. Meeting Night: Since the MBTC now meet on Thursday evenings BBUG members agreed to change our meeting time to the first Wednesday of the month, effective from October. JB agreed to change the room bookings.
4. Web Site: JD has now completed work on the new web site and it is ready to go live. It was agreed that JB would have the opportunity for input before this happens.
5. GVBR Sponsorship: DL reported that he has not yet heard back from council staff about this.
6. Possible Survey of BCC Candidates: BV has been contacted about this and have responded with suggestions about suitable questions. BV are now planning to run a workshop on the subject, 5-8pm 23 October at the Royal Exhibition Building after the Australian Cycling Show. It appears that BV will coordinate surveys in a number of municipalities. However they require input from members to help them formulate appropriate questions and volunteers to run the campaign and interview council candidates.

Extraordinary BBUG Meeting Wednesday 15th September

At the September BBUG meeting we were joined by Damon Rao, Travelsmart Project Officer with the state Department of Infrastructure (DOI), who's recently compiled Travelsmart maps for the cities of Melbourne and Darebin. These are based on Melway maps, but also show bike routes, both 'official' on road lanes and off road trails, and 'unofficial' favourite shortcuts and back street routes.

This reinforces the idea that every street or path can be part of the bike network, not just the main roads which have been specially treated by VicRoads. We were also inspired by the new City of Whitehorse bike map, which was hot off the press in early September, and shows what Boroondara cyclists are missing.

Boroondara is one of the next in line for a Travelsmart map, and Damon wanted our local knowledge to help compile it, so the following Wednesday Graeme and Jason met at Phil's house for a couple of hours. In between the homemade biscuits (9/10) and the instant coffee (3/10) we used our own experience, plus printed input from Graham and Harvey, to colour in lines on a large map supplied by Damon. It's early yet but we eagerly await the result which will be useful to local and visiting cyclists, pedestrians and public transport users.

YHA

YHA Cycling is made up of people who enjoy cycling in the suburbs and out in country Victoria with a sociable group of like-minded people, aged mainly between mid 20s and mid 40s. YHA Cycling is a recreational club, not a racing club, and we do a mixture of day and weekend rides. The group is based in Melbourne, Victoria, under the umbrella of the YHA Australia, and is one of a number of such local YHA activities groups.

Visitors (whether members of YHA or not) are welcome to attend any of our rides or other activities. Please note that cyclists aged under 18 must be accompanied by an adult.
