Biographical/Historical Note

The Foltz Photography Studio in Savannah, Georgia was established by George Raymond Foltz (circa 1881-1957), a native of Shamokin, Pennsylvania. Foltz came to Savannah in 1899 from Atlantic City, New Jersey, where he was associated with the boardwalk photography studio of Harry Phillips. His Savannah business was known as Franklin and Foltz (116 Bull Street) in 1900, then Foltz and Co. in 1901. In 1915, Foltz moved the studio to 240 Bull Street. He relocated the business again in 1917, to 10 West Broughton Street, where it remained until 1954, known during this time as Foltz Studio and as Foltz Photography. Between 1954 and 1965, the studio was operated at 30 West Broughton Street. Foltz retired in 1949, and the business was acquired by Augusta Klask Cordray (Mrs. Arthur A., 1900-1971), a native of Bonn, Germany. George Foltz died in 1957 and was survived by his wife, Robena Wilson Foltz, and three brothers.

Mrs. Cordray, who had worked for Foltz since the 1920's, continued to operate the studio under the names, Foltz Photography and Foltz Studio until her retirement in the 1960's. After the studio closed in 1965, Mrs. Cordray donated the studio's photograph collection to the Georgia Historical Society.

Scope and Content Note

This collection consists of photographic prints and negatives (including glass negatives) produced by the Foltz Photography Studio in Savannah, Georgia, primarily depicting the Savannah/Chatham County, Georgia area from the early 1900's up to 1960. Foltz did some copy photography, thus, there are a few photographs of images that pre-date the time his work began in Savannah. Subject areas depicted include: agriculture; cotton gins; farms; plantations; animals; cattle; rabbits; architectural elements; fireplaces; art; buildings; asylums and homes; auditoriums; churches; City and Town Halls; convents; courthouses; customs houses; fire stations; galleries and museums; hospitals; veterinary hospitals; jails; libraries; opticians; orphanages; police departments; post offices; sanatoriums; schools; synagogues; theaters; transient bureaus; universities and colleges; business enterprises; advertisements; banks; hotels; markets; merchants exchanges; restaurants and bars; stores; communication; radios; telephones; dwellings; apartment houses; cabins; housing projects; interiors; named houses; unidentified houses; street views; events; baptisms; beauty contests; circuses; contests; fairs; festivals; holidays; pageants; parades; picnics; theatrical productions; furniture; fires; geographical locations; archaeological sites; cemeteries; cities and towns; counties; forests; gardens; historical markers; historical trees; islands; parks; public squares; states; wetlands; unidentified landscapes; industry; beverage; boat and ship; chemical; food; iron; lumber; motion pictures; naval stores; paper; petroleum; steel; tobacco; utilities; machinery; maps. Military; airbases; barracks; forts; military organizations; uniforms; wars; monuments and memorials; music; bands and orchestras; choirs and choruses; jukeboxes; occupations and employment; chimney sweeps; firefighters; work relief; organizations; people; sports; archery; baseball; basketball; bicycling; billiards; boating; fishing; golf; horseracing; horse shows; hunting; shooting; miniature golf; motorcycling; polo; rodeo; tennis; toys; transportation; aircraft; airlines; airports; airships; air shows; aviators; carts and buggies; harbors; motor vehicles; railroads; rivers; roads; shipping; trailers; and weather.

Names houses included in the collection are: Andrew Low (Colonial Dames Headquarters, 329 Abercorn); Bulloch-Habersham (Barnard St., demolished); Cranston (Perry at Drayton St., demolished); Green-Meldrim (14 W. Macon St.);

Houstoun-Johnson-Screven (Abercorn at Congress St., demolished); Hunter-Mackay (125 E. Congress St.); Joseph Stiles (Yamacraw, demolished); Marshall (163 W. Broad St., demolished); Minis (204 W. Hull St.); Owens-Thomas (124 Abercorn St.); Pink House (23 Abercorn St.); Scarbrough (41 W. Broad St.); Sorrell-Weed (6 W. Harris St.); Stoddard-Barrow (17 W. McDonough St.); Wayne-Gordon (Juliette Gordon Low birthplace, 10 E. Oglethorpe Ave.); and the Wetter House (later the Savannah Female Orphan Asylum, 423 W. Oglethorpe Ave.), including photos of ironwork and views taken during the time it was the Savannah Female Orphan Asylum.

Some of the photographs may be attributed to the work of Will Bond, a combat photographer during World War II. Bond attended Savannah schools and began working with Foltz in 1937. He managed the commercial business when Foltz retired and later established his own Savannah photography studio.

The negatives are restricted from patron use.

This finding aid also includes an index to people depicted in this collection.

These school photos include exterior views of buildings, playgrounds, and gardens and interior views of classrooms, auditoriums, chapels, libraries, lunchrooms, and kitchens. Most views include students and/or teachers. There are photos of Chatham County school buses (Charles Ellis, 1931); Maypoles and May queens (E. Broad St. and Price St., 1940-1946); school elections (Harris St., 1952); graduations (Cuyler, Madame Cargo, and Madame Freeman); balls and banquets (Haven Home and Commercial High); Savannah High R.O.T.C.; and street crossing guards (Waters Ave., 1946). Included, also, is a photograph of the architect's drawing of Savannah High School.

Other locations depicted in these photos are an armory (Benedictine); the Second African

Baptist Church (Cuyler St. School graduation, 1940); and the Coconut Grove (Madame Cargo's class celebration, 1937). Identified persons include: Nina Pape (Pape School, 1940); Mr. Alfred Vick (Savannah High, 1946); and John Varnadoe (Savannah High, 1946). Students and teachers in Commercial High School photographs are identified on the backs of those photoprints.
