The tests listed above are not the only tests that require prior-authorization. The tests listed above are the ones known to require prior-authorization with the insurances listed. Commercial, Medicaid HMO and Out of State BCBS insurances not listed here should be called for benefits on every high-dollar test in order to determine prior-authorization requirements. Because of the clinical information required by most insurance companies for a pre-authorization, it is the patient and the provider who are responsible for beginning the prior-authorization process.
