▶ You can self-attest to your shelter expenses on your food stamp/SNAP application or recertification form (which is signed under penalty of perjury), or you can use this form to attest to your costs. You do not need to provide a lease, rent receipt or proof of homeownership costs unless DTA determines that the information provided is questionable. Be sure to tell DTA if you pay for any heating or cooling (AC) costs separate from your rent (any time of year) or if you get fuel assistance to pay part of your rent.

DTA does require proof of where you live (your residence). This is different from how much you pay for rent or mortgage. To verify residence, you can use a bank statement, wage stub or RMV license or state ID with your current address, a utility bill, a letter from a government agency with your address, a lease, statement from a roommate or other document that prove your address.
