that person is known for. The writer uses Jemison's education	 Jemison was born on October 17, 1956, in Decatur, Alabama, but she grew up in Chicago, Illinois. There weren't many well-known African-American female role models while Jemison was growing up, but she didn't let that stop her from achieving her goals. She was especially interested in anthropology, archaeology and astronomy. Luckily, her parents encouraged those interests. That encouragement drove her to excel. She graduated from high school at 16! Then she earned degrees in chemical engineering 	 The writer provides information about Jemison's childhood.

No challenge was too great for Jemison to take on. Jemison's accomplishments did not end there. In 1981, she joined NASA's space program in Houston, Texas. And in 1988, Jemison realized her biggest dream: She finally became an astronaut! Just four years later, she was named science mission specialist (another NASA first) on an Endeavour flight.	 The writer gives examples of Jemison's accomplishments.
The conclusion lets — the reader know why Jemison is an important person to learn about.	Today, Jamison encourages young people—especially women • and girls—to study the sciences. Her life example teaches us to follow our dreams, no matter how great.
