

Women's Preventive Health

UnitedHealthcare Community Plan wants you to take care of yourself. While the guidelines in this section apply to most women, you should discuss them with your doctor because you may need more - or less - frequent checkups.

Prevention is the key to decreasing the risk of disease. Here are some things that you can do to keep yourself healthy:

- don't smoke or use tobacco in any form
- eat a healthy diet
- exercise regularly (30 to 60 minutes at least three times a week)
- don't use illegal drugs or drink alcohol in excess
- practice safe sex
- always wear seat belts when driving
- see your doctor on a regular basis

Here are general guidelines for a healthy female who has no symptoms of disease

<h2>Doctor visits and exams</h2>	A full physical exam with your doctor includes: health assessment, blood pressure, height, weight and body mass index (BMI), risk evaluation and counseling. Let your doctor know if you have any history or family history of heart disease, cancer, diabetes (sugar), alcohol/drug use, domestic violence, sexual abuse or disease, suicide or depression. You need an exam every 1-5 years according to your age, risks, or as ordered by your doctor.
<h2>Tests</h2>	The following tests are part of your regular doctor visits: diabetes screening, cholesterol and lipid screening, glaucoma screening, colorectal cancer screening, Chlamydia screening, pap smear, clinical breast exam and mammogram. You will need these tests every 1-5 years based on your age, risks, or as ordered by your doctor.
<h2>Immunizations</h2>	You need the following immunizations/shots as recommended by the Centers for Disease Control (CDC): Tetanus (Td) booster every 10 years, Influenza (Flu shot) every year if high risk, Pneumonia if high risk; or once at age 65 and a booster may be needed after 5 years.
<h2>Diet and Exercise</h2>	You only have one body, and keeping it healthy takes a good diet and plenty of exercise. Ask your doctor before starting any diet/exercise plan.

Cervical Cancer

Each year about 16,000 women develop cervical cancer. If you are between 18 and 65 and have ever been sexually active, you are at regular risk for cervical cancer.

You are at higher risk for getting cervical cancer if:

- You started to have sex before you were age 18
- You have had more than 1 sex partner
- You have ever had a sexually transmitted disease
- You smoke
- You have a history of abnormal Pap results
- You have a history of STD or HIV
- You have vaginal spotting or bleeding between menstrual periods, after intercourse or after menopause

To find cervical cancer you need to have a pap smear. Beginning at age 18 you should have a pap smear every year. If you have 3 normal tests or had a total hysterectomy, you may only need to have a pap smear every 3 years. If you are over age 65, you may not need to have any more pap smears. But you need to talk to your doctor about this. If you are at higher risk, talk to your doctor about getting examined more often.

Pap smears are FREE to UnitedHealthcare Community Plan members. Here are links for more information on cervical cancer:

BREAST CANCER

Breast cancer is the most common cancer among women in the United States. Some women are at higher risk for getting breast cancer, that's why it is important for you to be checked regularly.

You are at higher risk for getting breast cancer if:

- Someone in your family has or had breast cancer
- You are over age 50
- You never had a baby
- Your first baby was born after you turned 30 years old
- You got your first period early
- You stopped having periods later in life
- You already had breast cancer in one breast

Schedule for breast exam/mammogram:

- 18-39 years of age - Clinical breast exam every 3 years (Your doctor might order a mammogram if members of your family or mother had breast cancer)
- 40-69 years of age - Clinical breast exam and mammogram every 1-2 years
- 70+ years of age – Doctor and patient to decide on screening

Once you turn age 40, your chances for getting breast cancer go up. Beginning at age 40 you should have a mammogram once every 1-2 years. A mammogram is a low dose x-ray of your breasts that can help find cancer early when the cancer is easier to treat. At least once a year you should also have a clinical breast exam performed by a doctor or nurse. If you are at higher risk for breast cancer, talk to your doctor about getting examined more often.

Mammograms and clinical breast exams are FREE. If you have one mammogram and need another because your doctor is concerned, UnitedHealthcare Community Plan pays for the second one also. For more information on breast cancer click on the links below:
