Purpose: Non-resident employees of a manufacturing plant located in New Mexico within 20 miles of the Mexican border may allocate income earned at the qualified manufacturing plant to the employees' states of residence. For each year the employer applies and is approved to be a qualified employer, the non-resident employee may elect to allocate to his or her state of residence the wages earned at the qualified manufacturing plant. The income that the non-resident may allocate to the state of residence is limited to the wages earned at the approved, qualified manufacturing plant. Other New Mexico source income must be allocated or apportioned to New Mexico. See publication FYI-360 for additional information.

How to file: To apply to be a qualified employer of a qualified manufacturing plant for calendar year 2013, you must submit this form to the New Mexico Taxation and Revenue Department for approval. Attach schedules used to calculate line items completed on page 2 of this application. Indicate the residency status of employees and the average hours worked per week for New Mexico residents. Once you have been approved, your non-resident employees may allocate the wages earned at the qualified manufacturing plant for tax year 2013 to their states of residency.
