Short rotation woody crops (SRWC) are being developed as a sustainable supply of woody biomass for the production of bioenergy, biofuels and bioproducts as well as for traditional solid wood and fiber products. Interest in SRWC has developed in the past because of multiple environmental and rural development benefits associated with their production and use, and most recently because of increasing concerns about dependence on and impacts associated with the consumption of fossil fuels.

As a result of increasing interest in SRWC the amount of related activity is expanding rapidly. The 8th Biennial Short Rotation Woody Crops Operations Working Group conference is an excellent forum to learn about the latest developments in the science, production, harvesting, use and policies related to SRWC. The conference will also explore challenges and opportunities of successful commercialization of SRWC as a source of fiber or as an energy feedstock material. Please join us in Syracuse, NY from October 17 – 19, 2010 to learn more about SRWC and their role in the growing renewable energy economy and traditional forest industries.

The conference will be held adjacent to the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry campus in Syracuse, NY at the Syracuse University Sheraton Hotel and Conference Center. Please explore the web pages at this site for further details.

I would like to sponsor the conference at the following level:

$2500	Platinum
$1500	Gold
$1000	Silver
$500	Bronze

At and the Platinum, Gold and Silver level sponsors will be recognized as a Sustaining Sponsor for the Short Rotation Woody Crops Operations Working Group, for a two year period. Platinum level sponsors will be thanked from the podium prior to introduction and welcome at the plenary session.
