Section 4 – Estimating your payroll

Liabe earnings is the term ACC uses to describe the part of your payroll that is assessable for levies. To estimate your liabe earnings complete the table below, from the date you started your business until 31 March 2008.

Earnings information
Total gross payroll	$
less total earnings not liable for levies (such as redundancy payments, pensions)	-$
less other payments not liable (such as payments to contractors who meet their own ACC liabilities)	-$
less total excess paid to employees over the maximum of $110,018.00	-$
Total	$

Section 5 – Estimating your non-PAYE shareholder-employees' remuneration

A shareholder-employee is someone who is both a shareholder and an employee of a company. For ACC purposes there are two types of shareholder-employees – those who receive a regular salary/wage from the company that is subject to PAYE deductions, and those who receive an annual salary that is not subject to PAYE deductions.

Your shareholder-employees with PAYE deductions should be included in section 4 – Estimating your payroll.

Enter the estimated remuneration for your non-PAYE shareholder-employees below from the date you started business until 31 March 2011.
