Sent to the Principal: Students Talk About Making High Schools Better by Kathleen Cushman and the youth of What Kids Can Do

“In all the current wave of reform, it’s amazing how little anyone asks us to listen to the voices of students. Young people rarely make an appearance on the stage of this current conversation around ‘upping the standards,’ competing better in the world of commerce, meeting the needs of colleges and employers. None of that conversation will amount to much if our purposes do not engage the students of our schools. Young people may at first look suspiciously at our intrusion, even resist it. But what Kathleen Cushman reminds us is that they are asking for us to enter their world, and to join ours as well. Until we make it one world, across generations, our lofty ends are unreachable.” – from the preface by Deborah Meier
