Children, Nature & Summer Camps

In a high-tech society, sit-down indoor activities, such as TV, video games and computers, dominate our children's lives. Limited outdoor play has created obstacles for children, and maybe even their parents if outdoor play was not introduced to them as a child. Let's set a goal: to help our summer camp children develop a better awareness of and appreciation for the environment. Discover new resources to better understand the potential and benefits of the outdoors. Be prepared to take kids outside to play this summer!

Part 1: Discover the World Outside:

Office of Environmental Education Tour of Online Resources

- Environmental Education Certification
- Grant & Advertisement Opportunities
- Environmental Education Centers as a Resource

Part 2: Funding a Pilot Outdoor Summer Program

- Local Grant Funding and Selection of Outdoor Specialist
- Registration Packet for Parent/Guardian

Part 3: Putting Kids in the Woods; Nature Adventures at Piedmont Environmental Center (PEC)

- Nature Camp Series
- Selected Classes from PEC
- The Eastern Box Turtle Project

Part 4: Making Natural Connections Happen

- Importance of Connecting Children and Nature
- How to Relate Information on a Child's Level
- Resource Availability
