PRACTICAL THERAPEUTIC INTERVENTION FOR CHILDREN WITH MOTOR SPEECH DISORDERS

This full-day program will provide an overview of what to look for in children with motor speech issues.

Learning Outcomes

1. Participants will demonstrate understanding of the overall presentation of children with motor speech disorders (tone, posture, midline control).
2. Participants will understand and describe how resource allocation affects treatment.
3. Participants will describe how to determine if they as therapists are taxing too many systems.
4. Participants will demonstrate an understanding of why sensory input is important and how to incorporate sensory based activities into functional sessions.

About The Presenters

Tracey Delio, M.A.CCC/SLP has been providing speech and language services to toddlers, preschoolers and school age children on Long Island for the last 15 years. Tracey has worked extensively with other professionals on interdisciplinary teams which has broadened her knowledge base on a variety of disabilities. Her areas of special interest include motor speech disorders, sensory integration disorders, early language development and PDD/ Autism Spectrum Disorders. Tracey is a Certified PROMPT Instructor and teaches workshops in various locations throughout the United States. She is also an adjunct instructor for the Division of Continuing Education and Professional Development at Molloy College.

Jennifer Shapiro, M.A. CCC-SLP, PROMPT Instructor, is an ASHA certified speech-language pathologist currently in private practice in Plainview, New York. She has clinical experience in various settings including the public school system and the New York State Early Intervention Program. Jennifer began her PROMPT technique training in 2002 and is PROMPT certified. She specializes in treatment of children on the Autism Spectrum, those with motor speech dysfunction such as Apraxia and with sensory integration dysfunction. She is also an adjunct instructor for the Division of Continuing Education and Professional Development at Molloy College.

SPEECH AND LANGUAGE EVALUATIONS AND ONGOING ASSESSMENT: QUANTIFYING SUBJECTIVE MEASURES

This program focuses on the use of free and low-cost technology to quantify subjective measures during speech-language evaluation and therapy. Participants will learn about and use widely available speech analysis programs and other software that will enhance their clinical assessments. An emphasis will be placed on using speech analysis software to demonstrate and support eligibility criteria at the initial evaluation level and to measure progress during ongoing assessment in therapy.

Participants will engage in hands-on training and practice of 1) converting and preparing media, such as clinical videos or audio files, for sound analysis, 2) objective analysis measures to supplement, confirm, or exclude subjective impressions, and 3) generating reports for supplementing clinical assessments and service recommendation reports.

This program is suitable for individuals with all levels of computer skill and working in a variety of clinical settings. Examples include schools, hospitals, private homes and rehabilitative centers.

It is strongly recommended that participants bring a personal laptop to this course in order to participate in hands-on training and practice. Instructions on downloading the free software necessary for course demonstration and participation will be provided prior to the course date.

About The Presenter

Janet Ann Lee, MA, CCC-SLP, TSHH is a certified speech-language pathologist with related certification in applied behavior analysis. She also is a trained vocologist, with certification from the National Center for Voice and Speech, as well as professional operatic training and experience in theatre, opera, television, film, and print media. Ms. Lee's areas of clinical specialization include fluency, language-based learning disorders, special education referral procedures, and habilitation of professional singing voice. Research areas of interest include spectral analysis of singing voice, neurophysiology of music cognition, and neural overlap of language and music.

PROMPT Study Groups

Molloy's Speech-Language Pathology Department is pleased to host PROMPT study groups throughout the year. These groups are facilitated by two PROMPT certified clinicians/instructors. The groups are reasonably priced and afford participants the opportunity to receive expert feedback on their clients, review PROMPT technique and observe and discuss video demonstrations. Each group is geared either towards clinicians who have completed Level one PROMPT training or those who have completed Level two/Bridging or obtained certification. The next programs will be held on 11/9-11, 2012 at our Suffolk Center campus, on 4/5-7/12 and on 6/14-16, 2013 at our Rockville Centre campus. Please contact the Molloy College Speech, Language and Hearing Center for information regarding registration and further information at (516) 442-1211 or slhc@molloy.edu.

Locations

Each program will take place in the Hays Theatre in the Wilbur Arts Centre on the Rockville Centre campus, 1000 Hempstead Avenue, Rockville Centre, NY 11571. Directions to the campus can be found on the following webpage: www.molloy.edu/directions/rvc. Directions and a campus map will be sent either with your registration confirmation or in early March.

Speech-Language Pathology Department

Molloy's Speech-Language Pathology Department continues to offer a comprehensive undergraduate program in Speech-Language Pathology/Audiology and is now offering an M.S. in Speech-Language Pathology. The masters program in speech-language pathology at Molloy College is a Candidate for Accreditation in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology (CAA) of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association. This is a "pre-accreditation" status with the CAA, awarded to developing or emerging programs for a maximum period of 5 years.

Additionally, our Speech, Language and Hearing Center is located off campus in a new facility and continues to serve the community by providing an array of evaluation and treatment services.
