The Latest and Greatest - A Session for Leaders

Barbara Haxton, OHSAI

As always, there is a lot going on in Head Start. Participants will dissect the latest federal and state initiatives and events and what they mean for local program leaders, with input from Ohio's Futures Group.

Topics addressed will include:

- Federal Reviews 2013: What's going on? A look at the reviews to date and input from those who have experienced them.
- Region V Updates, the T/TA system and DC (if any) and your feed back from recent encounters with those in charge.
- Changes in CDA renewal system – what does that mean for us?
- Other love notes from OHS via IM's and PI's

Infant & Toddler Best Practice: Enhanced Story Time for Infants and Toddlers

Holly Scheibe, Ohio Child Care Resource and Referral Association

Exposure to books and the interactions surrounding them is a foundation for early learning, development and literacy for future school success for infants and toddlers! But what are the best books for infants and toddlers and how can a teacher successfully conduct story times so everyone benefits? Participants will explore a variety of books and discuss story time strategies for interactive, educational and enjoyable book times. Also, participants will create activity examples to extend learning activities based on a story through the use of webbing. In addition to immediate application for center based caregivers, this content will help home visitors in supporting parents' ability to facilitate learning in their children. This session is approved for SUTQ Specialized Training.

Social Emotional Field Guide: Professional Development

John Kinsel

Those who work with young children and their families must consistently display attitudes, language and actions that are characterized by a core set of beliefs and values. At no time are these standards of professionalism more tested than in the area of supporting and guiding young children's behavior. These positive beliefs, attitudes and language for professionals start with their own social and emotional awareness. Come to this session to explore your own understanding of this key area in order to strengthen your practice with children and their families.

This is a full day session that will continue this afternoon as the Health/Disabilities Roundtable.

This session is approved for SUTQ Specialized Training.

Priceless Gifts: A Session for Parents

Sue Shackelford, HARCATUS Head Start

The session will include storytelling and activities that focus on helping parents to nurture, protect, and further develop the wondrous qualities of their children. In the process, parents will also come to recognize their own gifts, and better understand parenting styles. This session has a strong foundation of self-respect and values and will create a message of hope, love, dignity, and healing.

Thursday, December 6, 9:00am to 12:00pm continued

Dissecting Data

Scott Siegfried, Miami Valley Child Development Centers

The 2013 Monitoring Protocol uses the terms “analysis” or “analyze” 26 times in the new document and the word “data” can be found another 45 times. So what does data analysis consist of and what are the skills and traits needed for those charged with this task? Come and contribute to Ohio’s growing understanding of data analysis using the familiar lens of CLASS. This session will build on the data content covered at the OHSAI Education Services Institute by the National Center on Quality Teaching and Learning.

This session has been submitted for SUTQ Specialized Training approval.

Crucial Conversations to Support Family Engagement

Les Helms, Columbus State Community College

Conversations that confront or question values, beliefs, or behavior are the most difficult conversations to have. However, to build meaningful partnerships with families, we must sometimes have “those conversations”. These conversations are especially charged when the discussion occurs between people from different cultures, genders, & status groups. This workshop will explore methods for facing these crucial conversations & provide tools that will help you handle them effectively. The practical, hands-on tools offered are designed to: master the crucial conversations; promote a safe environment in which others are encouraged to speak freely; offer techniques for speaking persuasively & not abrasively; introduce ways to suspend judgment; & translate crucial conversations into action plans that get results. Participants will leave this workshop with an increased understanding of the dynamics inherent in difficult situations.

This session has been submitted for SUTQ Specialized Training approval.
