

The Phillipian.

Vol. XV.

Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., Oct. 6, 1892.

No. 8.

Communication.

Editors of the Phillipian:

Last year there was talk of forming a more compact and definite school organization, to systematize the handling of school matters, and to correct some defects in present customs. In order to bring it before the school for consideration, I suggest the following groundwork of a school constitution:

I. The general affairs of the school shall be under direction of the "Academy Council," a body of men chosen on the following basis: 3 Seniors, 3 Middlers, 2 Junior Middlers, 1 Junior, and 2 resident graduates of the Academy.

II. The president of the Senior classical class, in the fall and spring terms, and of the Senior English class in the winter term, shall act as president of the school, and be ex-officio a member of the Academy Council.

III. During the last week of the school year, members of the Academy Council for the following year shall be elected in joint meetings (P.A. and P.S.) of the three classes remaining in school; the members for the Junior class shall be elected at the beginning of the school year.

IV. The Academy Council shall meet by call of the school president, within five days after opening of the school year, and elect a president and a secretary who shall keep accurate records of the meetings, both of the school and the Council.

V. The undergraduate members of the Council shall, after organization, report to the school nominations for the graduate members to be chosen for the year.

VI. All questions of policy or action, which concern the general school life shall be referred to the Academy Council. If it is by them considered worthy of action by the school, it shall be reported by the president of the Council without unnecessary delay, at a school meeting, of which 24 hours' notice shall have been given, and there remanded to the school for discussion and action.

If any measure is disapproved by the Council, it shall nevertheless be reported by them, without adverse criticism, on the written request of 20 members of the school.

VII. It shall be the privilege of any member of the school proposing any plan or movement, to appear before the Academy Council and explain the same to them. It shall also be his privilege to speak first on the question in school meeting if he so desire, or to delegate one of the members of the Academy Council from his own class to do so in his stead.

VIII. All standing committees, school officials and boards of management for school interests shall be placed in nomination by the Academy Council. They shall place one ticket in nomination, two days before the time of election, and on the following day shall place in nomination any ticket handed the chairman with a written request of five members of the school.

If more than one ticket is nominated, it shall be the duty of the Council to provide printed or written ballots for the election.

IX. The temporary suspension of any clause of the constitution to meet a special exigency, or an amendment to the constitution itself, may be had by a two-thirds vote of the school.

The equality in numbers of the Middlers with the Seniors in the Council is suggested because the Middle class is always the larger, and, as it is to remain longer, has a deeper interest in some questions of school policy. The first nominations for boards of management are of course expected to be made after consultation with the team captains.

The plan of having two graduate members of the Council is a suggestion from Dr. Bancroft. The whole is offered after considerable thought, as a practical and democratic basis on which to conduct the school affairs.

K.

Editors of the Phillipian:

October 21st has been appointed as a national holiday, to be observed as Columbus Day, with special regard to the education and interests of the nation. Would it not be appropriate for Phillips Andover to plan some special and fitting exercises in the upper hall, either in the morning or evening? Recitations, readings and addresses concerning Columbus might be given both by students and members of the Faculty.

"COLUMBIAN."

Political.

Politics have been receiving marked attention in the school during the past week, and each of the more prominent parties has received recognition in the way of campaign organizations. The Republicans and Democrats met in separate bodies on Tuesday evening, and elected officers for the campaign.

The officers for the Republicans are: President, E. S. Sawyer, '93; vice-president, W. T. B. Williams, '93; secretary, N. A. Smyth, '93; treasurer, W. B. Hopkins '93; executive committee, A. R. Brubacher, '93, W. H. Gould, '94, J. P. Sawyer, '93, F. W. Conant, '93, and E. L. Foster, '93.

The following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, we, the Republicans of Phillips Academy firmly believe in the principles of the Republican party as outlined in the Minneapolis platform, and,

WHEREAS, we recognize that is the party of progress, and feel that its past history and present purposes are such as to justify the adherence to it of all patriotic young men, be it

Resolved, That we do hereby organize ourselves into the Republican Club of Phillips Academy, and that we pledge our support to Benjamin Harrison and Whitelaw Reid as the standard bearers of our party.

For the Democrats: president, P. R. Lester, '93; secretary and treasurer, W. M. Stuart, '93. H. Canfield, '93, H. B. Hickman, '94, H. P. Sanders, '94, R. M. Lester, '94, and C. Grilk, '95, were elected as executive committee. W. H. Cornwell, '94, and F. W. Collins, '94, were chosen, respectively, major and adjutant of the brigade.

On Thursday evening a Prohibition Club was also organized with the following officers: president, G. H. McClellan; secretary, Benjamin C. Auten.

Great Schools an Honor.

A great school or cluster of schools gives celebrity to a town or city. And it is a unique celebrity, and one that is most desirable. A university town, like Oxford and Cambridge in England, like Cambridge, New Haven and Princeton in this country, has a reputation by itself, honorable, desirable, distinctive. It speaks of intelligence, refinement and power. . . .

And thus it is in regard to towns and cities which are noted for schools devoted to secondary instruction. Academies and great schools where boys and girls begin their career, to end in colleges and universities or in happy homes and stations of usefulness and honor, are lifted up in the midst of other towns as cities set upon a hill. These institutions give reputation and character to the town. So it was with New Ipswich and Westford, and Dudley and Litchfield, and many other places where the youth gathered in the old-time academies. So it is now with Ashburnham and Wilbraham, with Easthampton and Andover and Exeter. Let the town become noted for thrift, business ability, mechanical ingenuity, beauty of location and surroundings, industry and good morals, yet the fact that it is the seat of famous schools will be a peculiar honor.—Ex.

The Andover Press.

The communication concerning a new departure in the handling of school affairs is very deserving of a careful reading by every fellow in school. For some time a feeling has existed that a change for the better should be made, and this communication, we think, is but an expression of that general feeling.

When we consider that there are more students here than at almost any one of the smaller colleges, it will be evident that some better form than the present shiftless methods of shaping school policy is necessary. Again, it is not a mere question of getting opinions, but the having of matters so presented that the correct opinions can readily be formed. As it is, almost any man who can get the attention of the school usually carries his point, and that very often before the school is thoroughly aware of what it has done. It is needless to say that the school is often imposed upon, or at any rate ill-considered plans are frequently adopted by it, owing to a lack of opportunity for examining such projects.

We would not urge the school to adopt necessarily the plans which the communication suggests, although we believe them to be good in the main. But what we do urge is that some thought and action be taken in regard to this matter.

The plan of having a board responsible to the school for its action is certainly superior to the present irresponsible method, and unless some better idea is presented we can see no reason why a constitution similar to the one suggested should not be adopted.

We advise that time be taken for considering the change. The PHILLIPPIAN will be open to all for a discussion of the matter in the meantime.

We have not yet learned whether we are to have a holiday on Columbus Day or not, but at any rate some exercise befitting the day ought to be held. We had intended speaking of it in this issue before receiving the communication. Although it is late there is yet time to prepare a very creditable programme. The school children of the town expect to be out in parade that day a thousand strong and Phillips will be but following the example of many of the larger institutions of learning in paying some honor to the great discoverer. In order that it may be wholly a school affair we would suggest that a meeting for this purpose be called not later than next Tuesday when it can be determined what support the school will give this idea. It may be, also, that some person of distinction can be secured to address the school on this occasion.

Our representatives in tennis go to Exeter this afternoon. They will take with them the best wishes of the school. All we ask of them is that they put forth their best efforts. The few who go this afternoon have the name and honor of our school in their charge, and it will be their duty to guard both in the best manner. We hope that this first meeting of the year will be a renewal of those pleasant relations between the two schools which seem to increase year by year.

Almost 10 Years

—OF—

Hustling!

FOR THE Students of PHILLIPS ACADEMY, with a growing trade each succeeding year, begins to show results. Our trade with the Phillips Academy Students last year was more than double that of any other year, and there was a reason for it. A knowledge of the wants; a desire to gratify them; a taste in selecting and A No. 1 style in making, all have succeeded in making our work of the highest merit. New students will follow old in selecting their clothing maker.
