Primary Care Update XLIX: GI's at War with Disease Saturday, September 13, 2008

CONFERENCE DESCRIPTION AND TARGET AUDIENCE

This course has been designed to provide practical, clinical information for physicians, nurses, and other medical professionals in the following specialties: Family Practice, General Practice, Internal Medicine, Obstetrics, Gynecology, Emergency Medicine, and Gastroenterology by emphasizing pertinent or new information, newer approaches and disease recognition, diagnosis, and/or treatment planning. Conference participants will benefit through a presentation of didactic conference topics. These topics were specifically chosen to enhance the existing physician information base, improve clinical capabilities and increase the therapeutic options to the physician. This conference will focus on the changing healthcare environment, scientific validity of methodology in clinical practice as well as cost effectiveness and impact on patient outcomes in the areas of interest to medical professionals involved in the care of gastroenterology.
