Short description of the company	The Wild Pansy Press is a collective art practice and publishing project based in the School of Fine Art, University of Leeds; our work explores publication in its widest sense as a way of making and a way of distributing art. We also run a small gallery space within the University, an annual Artists' Book Fair and a portable, nomadic project space - the Portable Reading Room - which tours to various venues.
	There is a core team of two directors, who are also academic staff in the School of Fine Art and practising artists, plus a wider group of participating artists, writers and student volunteers. Our publications are developed through close cooperation with contributors and we are committed to social inclusivity, creative excellence and educational outreach.
	Wild Pansy Press is a not-for-profit organisation.
