1911

In 1911, Jane S. McKimmon was charged with bringing cutting-edge, research-guided programming to the women and families of rural North Carolina. Beginning with tomato clubs and the home demonstration program, women were taught how to preserve food and increase their family's income. This knowledge empowered them to join together in a statewide network where they could learn together, create camaraderie in their communities and act as advocates for change in North Carolina.

In the tradition of Home Demonstration and Home Economics, Family & Consumer Sciences continues to bring relevant and timely programming to the citizens of North Carolina. We view the family, in all its diverse forms, as the cornerstone of a healthy society. Our mission is to improve the well-being of the family through programs that educate, influence public policy and help families put research-based knowledge to work in their lives.

Please join us as we honor the spirit, dedication and leadership of the women who are the foundation of Family & Consumer Sciences, and celebrate our shared commitment to the future of families in North Carolina.

Introducing

Ordinary Women, Extraordinary Service to family, community and North Carolina

*with a forward by NC State First Lady
Mrs. Susan Woodson*

A 300 page coffee table quality book highlighting the past of Extension Home Demonstration and the impact of Family & Consumer Sciences and its Extension & Community Association volunteers.

Did you know Family & Consumer Sciences and the Extension & Community Association are responsible for:

- * war bond sales that provided over one-half of the $4 million cost for the WWI hospital ship, Larkspur?
- * libraries and book mobiles in many rural counties?
- * hot lunch programs in North Carolina's rural schools?
- * raising $100,000 from "butter and egg" money to jump-start state funding for the Jane S. McKimmon Center for Extension & Continuing Education at NC State?
- * helping bring electricity to North Carolina's rural citizens?

Ordinary Women, Extraordinary Service will be available for $40 from your County Extension Office, the NC FCS or ECA Foundation or online at <http://go.ncsu.edu/fcscentennial>
