WAY OF THE MASTER COURSE IN NEW WOODSTOCK - The Federated Church of New Woodstock will host an evangelism seminar based on the award-winning TV series "The Way of the Master (WOTM)." The seminar will be held eight consecutive Sundays at 9 a.m., starting September 13. The WOTM Basic Training Course is specially formatted to train Christians in a group setting to simply and confidently share the gospel with family, friends, and strangers. The lessons are designed to train attendees in the forgotten biblical principle of speaking directly to the conscience (the place of the knowledge of right and wrong) — "the way Jesus did." Using a captivating teaching style, evangelists Ray Comfort and Kirk Cameron not only instruct on how to witness, they demonstrate through fascinating on-the-street conversations with gang members, atheists, cult members, intellectuals, etc. This course has been commended by many Christian leaders, including John MacArthur, Ravi Zacharias and Joni Eareckson Tada. Broad Combination of Experience Matters In Next Madison

County Judge

By Judge Patrick O'Sullivan

The position of Madison County Judge, and the responsibility that comes with it, should not be taken lightly. Our Judge must be compassionate, objective and experienced in all aspects of the law. And our Judge must be acutely aware that every case is far more than just a number, or names on legal documents – people's lives are in our hands.

That is why I'm honored to be running this year for Madison County Judge, and was humbled to earn the endorsement of the Madison County Republican Committee back in May.

I admire the work Judge Biagio DiStefano has done for Madison County for the past 18 years. I saw the challenges that individuals and families faced in his court – coming up against some of the most turbulent times in their lives.

I'm taking this campaign very seriously because the success of the office is vital to our community's families. The Madison County Court is a large and critical part of our judicial system, actually being comprised of three courts - County (criminal/civil) Court, Family Court and Surrogate's Court.

I believe that my unique combination of experience makes me the best candidate for this position and has prepared me for the challenge ahead.

I've worked hard for the residents of our County for many years, as a Judge, trial attorney and educator. If elected as your next County Judge, I promise you that I will serve with the highest levels of compassion, honesty and integrity.

Get The Perfect Cheesecake Every Time By Cooking It Like This!...

Man, is there anything our slow cooker can't do?! Seriously, it's given us all sorts of amazing dishes (macaroni and cheese, meatloaf, and chocolate clusters, to name a few) and now we've found out that it makes some of the best cheesecake we've ever had!

The thing that makes this cheesecake so good is the fact that the slow cooker simultaneously bakes it and steams it. Steaming the cake makes it incredibly rich, smooth, and silky, so the texture is phenomenal, along with the classic flavor we all know and love. We plan to cook our cheesecakes like this from now on...what about you?!

Ingredients: Yields 1, 9-inch cake

Crust:

- 3/4 cup graham cracker crumbs
- 2-3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon

Filling:

- 2 (8 oz.) packages fat-free cream cheese, room temperature
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 2 large eggs
- 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract

Directions

1. Wrap the bottom and sides of a 9-inch springform pan tightly with 2 sheets of aluminum foil and set aside.
2. Place graham cracker crumbs, sugar and cinnamon in a small bowl and drizzle in melted butter. Note: start with 2 tablespoons and see how much you need.
3. Stir together until butter is fully incorporated and mixture resembles damp sand.
4. Transfer graham cracker crumbs to prepped pan and use your hands to press it firmly down into the bottom.
5. In a large bowl or mixer, beat cream cheese and sour cream until softened and smooth, then mix in sugar.
6. Once combined, beat in eggs one at a time and then add in vanilla extract.
7. Pour batter into springform pan and set aside.
8. With another 2-3 sheets of layered aluminum foil, roll them up to create a log and form log into a circle.
9. Place circle of foil in the bottom of slow cooker insert and pour in 3/4 cup hot water. Note: aluminum foil acts as an oven rack and should stand up above the water.
10. Place springform pan on foil log, making sure it doesn't touch the sides of slow cooker, and cover the slow cooker with 2-3 paper towels. Cover with slow cooker lid.
11. Cook on HIGH for 2 hours, then turn off heat and let cheesecake rest for another 1 hour. Do not remove slow cooker lid.
12. Once cooled, remove cheesecake from slow cooker and chill for 6 hours, or overnight before slicing and serving.

AJ'S ARCHERY BENEFIT BAGS $1200 FOR CHARITABLE FOUNDATION

Over 30 archers participated in AJ'S Archery's IBO World Championship Warm Up to benefit "Two Smiles One Hope," a Syracuse-based charity.

The event took place Saturday and Sunday, July 25 and 26 at AJ'S Archery, 3938 Nelson Heights Road in Cazenovia.

The shoot was a warm up for the International Bowhunting Organization's (IBO) World Championship in Ellicottville, NY.

In addition to the 3-D target range, AJ'S hosted fun and games for guests of all ages. Proceeds totaling $1200 from the target shoot and ticket sales benefitted the charity.

Two Smiles One Hope is a non-profit foundation created by the Willis family of Syracuse after their sons, Nolan and Jack, were diagnosed with Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD), a fatal genetic disorder. All funds raised by the foundation support research for life-extending procedures and the eventual cure of the disorder.

"As a local, family-owned and operated business, AJ'S Archery is aware of the needs right here in our own community," states Allison George. "We're pleased to have been able to make this contribution to such an important cause."

Nearly all men can stand adversity, but if you want to test a man's character, give him power.

Everyone has the obligation to ponder well his own specific traits of character. He must also regulate them adequately and not wonder whether someone else's traits might suit him better. The more definitely his own a man's character is, the better it fits him.

I have served as Judge in the Town of Nelson for 10 years, and in the Village of Cazenovia for the past four years. During this time, I've presided over criminal and civil trials, misdemeanors, violations, arraignment and preliminary jurisdiction over felonies, concurrent jurisdiction over Family Court matters, and much more. I have had to make those tough decisions on a daily basis that affect peoples lives.

In addition to my time as Judge, my experience also includes 22 years in private legal practice litigating cases in Federal, State, County, Family, Surrogate, City, Town and Village Courts throughout Upstate New York. I have spent my entire legal career in the courtroom. I am a member of the Million Dollar Advocates, where membership is limited to attorneys who have obtained verdicts in excess of a million dollars. Less than 1% of U.S. lawyers are members. I have also been recognized by my peers as one of the top trial attorneys in Upstate New York, as published in the 2013 New York Upstate Edition of Super Lawyers Magazine.

Early in my legal career, I also spent time prosecuting criminal cases in order to protect citizens. These challenging cases were particularly critical in shaping my approach on the bench years later when I was first elected as a Judge.

The law is always changing so a good attorney must never stop learning. That's what has made my years as an Adjunct Professor at Syracuse University Law School and Morrisville State College so rewarding.

I believe that this unique combination of experience, from serving as a Judge to Trial Attorney – as plaintiff, prosecution, civil and criminal defense – to Educator has provided me with a truly fair and balanced perspective. This combination of perspective will well serve the people who come before the Madison County Court, if I am elected.

This community means the world to me. My wife of 26 years, Susan, and I have raised our three children, Jacqueline, Hannah and Jake, here because we truly love it. Madison County has been and always will be our home.

Microscopic Rake Doubles Efficiency Of Low-cost Solar Cells

Date: August 12, 2015
 Source: SLAC National Accelerator Laboratory
 Researchers from the Department of Energy’s SLAC National Accelerator Laboratory and Stanford University have developed a manufacturing technique that could double the electricity output of inexpensive solar cells by using a microscopic rake when applying light-harvesting polymers.

When commercialized, this advance could help make polymer solar cells an economically attractive alternative to those made with much more expensive silicon-crystal wafers.

In experiments, solar cells made with the tiny rake double the efficiency of cells made without it and are 18 percent better than cells made using a microscopic straightedge blade.

The research was led by Zhenen Bao, a chemical engineering professor at Stanford and a member of the Stanford Institute for Materials and Energy Sciences (SIMES), which is run jointly by SLAC and Stanford. The team reported its results August 12 in Nature Communications.

“The fundamental scientific insights that come out of this work will give

Jay Pullman Art Exhibit At Library

There will be an exhibit of paintings by self-taught artist Jay Pullman at the New Woodstock Free Library showing August 17 through September 25. A reception for the artist will be held Friday, August 28 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The exhibit will be open for viewing during all regular library hours.

An English teacher by profession, Pullman began painting “To release the stress of teaching.” Soon, he was selling his work through a gallery owner in Ithaca who praised his work and enthusiastically encouraged him, Pullman recalls. At first Pullman aspired to be another Andrew Wyeth, but his work manufacturers a rational approach to improving their processes, rather than relying simply on trial and error," Bao said.

"We also expect this simple, effective and versatile concept will be broadly applicable to making other polymer devices where properly aligning the molecules is important."

The Problem With Polymers

Although prices for silicon-based solar cells are dropping, it still takes five to 15 years before they produce enough electricity to offset their purchase and installation. Silicon solar cells also require a large amount of energy to manufacture, which partly offsets their value as renewable energy sources.

Polymer-based photovoltaic cells are much cheaper because they're made of inexpensive materials that can be simply painted or printed in place. They are also flexible and require little energy to manufacture. While small, lab-scale samples can convert more than 10 percent of sunlight into electricity, the large-area coated cells have very low efficiency -- typically converting less than 5 percent, compared with 20-25 percent for commercial silicon-based cells.

Polymer cells typically combine two types of polymers: A donor, which converts sunlight into electrons, and an acceptor, which stores the electrons until they can be removed from the cell as usable electricity. But when this mixture is deposited scattering to determine how clearly the two polymers segregated themselves," said Mike Toney, SSRL Materials Sciences group leader and a co-author on the paper. "These are bread-and-butter techniques for which we've developed some novel approaches at SSRL in recent years."

To achieve the polymer patterns they wanted for the solar cells, the researchers made the pillars in the rake much shorter and more densely packed than those used earlier for organic semiconductors. They were 1.5 micrometers high and 1.2 micrometers apart; for comparison, a human hair is about 100 micrometers in diameter.

Close, But Not Too Close

"Ideally, the two types of photovoltaic polymers should be close enough to each other for electrons to move quickly from donor to acceptor, but not so close that the acceptor gives back its electrons before they can be harvested to electricity," said Yan Zhou, a Stanford researcher on Bao's team.

"Our new FLUENCE rake achieves this happy medium. Because we understand what's happening, we can tune the rake design and processing speed to alter the final polymer structures."

Future research will be aimed at applying the FLUENCE technique to other polymer blends and adapting it to rapid industrial-scale roll-to-roll printing processes -- which can reach speeds of 50 miles per hour -- that promise the lowest solar-cell manufacturing costs.

The Touch of a Friend

www.ishaah.com

An angel was sent down from heaven one day to visit a child who had nothing to say.
 Now this young child was poor -- great wealth she did lack, but she always was happy in spite of the fact.
 Until one day it happened -- her best friend went away and it left her heartbroken with nothing to say.
 Now the task to give hope to a heart that was so much in need of the angel was a great one indeed,
 And though great riches and power were at the angels command -- he sent a lost puppy and the healing began.
 The girl cheered the puppy as he chased down a stick and she started to giggle as her face he would lick.
 Then without any warning the girl whose heart broke found some reason for saying these words that she spoke --
"I love you little puppy - I hope you will stay! We will always be friends and together we'll play."
 Now the little girl was happy though she still remained poor, for she had a new friend someone to care for.
 You see riches and power are fine things indeed but for a broken heart that is not what you need.
 The angel was wise for he knew in the end how to mend a broken heart with the touch of a friend.

The Roomate

Two men, both seriously ill, occupied the same hospital room. One man was allowed to sit up in his bed for an hour each afternoon to help drain the fluid from his lungs. His bed was next to the room's only window. The other man had to spend all his time flat on his back. The men talked for hours on end. They spoke of their wives and families, their homes, their jobs, their involvement in the military service, where they had been on vacation. And every afternoon when the man in the bed by the window could sit up, he would pass the time by describing to his roommate all the things he could see outside the window. The man in the other bed began to live for those one hour periods where his world would be broadened and enlivened by all the activity and color of the world outside. The window overlooked a park with a lovely lake. Ducks and swans played on the water while children sailed their model boats. Young lovers walked arm in arm amidst flowers of every color of the rainbow. Grand old trees graced the landscape, and a fine view of the city skyline could be seen in the distance. As the man by the window described all this in exquisite detail, the man on the other side of the room would close his eyes and imagine the picturesque scene. One warm afternoon the man by the window described a parade passing by. Although the other man couldn't hear the band he could see it in his mind's eye as the gentleman by the window portrayed it with descriptive words. Days and weeks passed. One morning, the day nurse arrived to bring water for their baths only to find the lifeless body of the man by the window, who had died peacefully in his sleep. She was saddened and called the hospital attendants to take the body away. As soon as it seemed appropriate, the other man asked if he could be moved next to the window. The nurse was happy to make the switch, and after making sure he was comfortable, she left him alone. Slowly, painfully, he propped himself up on one elbow to take his first look at the world outside. Finally, he would have the joy of seeing it for himself. He strained to slowly turn to look out the window beside the bed. It faced a blank wall. The man asked the nurse what could have compelled his deceased roommate who had described such wonderful things outside this window. The nurse responded that the man was blind and could not even see the wall. She said, "Perhaps he just wanted to encourage you."

on a cell's conducting surface during manufacturing, the two types tend to separate as they dry into an irregular assortment of large clumps, making it more difficult for the cell to produce and harvest electrons.

The SLAC/Stanford researchers' solution is a manufacturing technique called "fluid-enhanced crystal engineering," or FLUENCE, which was originally developed to improve the electrical conduction of organic semiconductors.

In the current work, as the polymers are painted onto a conducting surface, they are forced through a slightly angled rake containing several rows of stiff microscopic pillars. The rake is scraped along the surface at the relatively slow speed of 25-100 micrometers per second, which translates to 3.5-14.2 inches per hour. The large polymer molecules untangle and mix with each other as they bounce off and flow past the pillars, ultimately drying into tiny nanometer-sized crystals of uniform size with enhanced electrical properties.

Simulations and X-rays

The researchers used computer simulations and X-ray analyses at two DOE Office of Science User Facilities -- SLAC's Stanford Synchrotron Radiation Lightsource (SSRL) and Lawrence Berkeley National Laboratory's Advanced Light Source (ALS) -- to customize the FLUENCE rake for making solar cells.

"At SSRL, the team used X-ray diffraction to measure the degree to which the polymers formed crystals and X-ray

There must have been from six to eight dozen spoons in the Brigade, and they marched away in the shape of a hollow square, with Dorothy, Billina and Toto in the center of the square. Before they had gone very far Toto knocked over one of the spoons by wagging his tail, and then the Captain of the Spoons told the little dog to be more careful, or he would be punished. So Toto was careful, and the Spoon Brigade moved along with astonishing swiftness, while Dorothy really had to walk fast to keep up with it.

By and by they left the woods and entered a big clearing, in which was the "Don't trisk it, Dorothy," advised the Yellow Hen. "Remember this is a fairy country, yet none of us three happens to be a fairy." Dorothy grew sober at this.

"P'raps you're right, Billina," she answered. "But how funny it is, to be captured by a lot of spoons!"

"I do not see anything very funny about it," declared a spoon. "We're the regular military brigade of the kingdom."

"What kingdom?" she asked.

"Utensia," said he.

"I never heard of it before," asserted Dorothy. Then she added thoughtfully, "I don't believe Ozma ever heard of Utensia, either. Tell me, are you not subjects of Ozma of Oz?"

"We have never heard of her," retorted a spoon. "We are subjects of King Kleaver, and obey only his orders, which are to bring all prisoners to him as soon as they are captured. So step lively, my girl, and march with us, or we may be tempted to cut off a few of your toes with our swords."

This threat made Dorothy laugh again. She did not believe she was in any danger; but here was a new and interesting adventure, so she was willing to be taken to Utensia that she might see what King Kleaver's kingdom was like.

Kingdom of Utensia.

Standing all around the clearing were a good many cookstoves, ranges and grills, of all sizes and shapes, and besides these there were several kitchen cabinets and cupboards and a few kitchen tables. These things were crowded with utensils of all sorts: frying pans, sauce pans, kettles, forks, knives, basting and soup spoons, nutmeg graters, sifters, colanders, meat saws, flat irons, rolling pins and many other things of a like nature.

When the Spoon Brigade appeared with the prisoners a wild shout arose and many of the utensils hopped off their stoves or their benches and ran crowding around Dorothy and the hen and the dog.

"Stand back!" cried the Captain, sternly, and he led his captives through the curious throng until they came before a big range that stood in the center of the clearing. Beside this range was a butcher block upon which lay a great cleaver with a keen edge. It rested upon the flat of its back, its legs were crossed and it was smoking a long pipe.

"Wake up, your Majesty," said the Captain. "Here are prisoners."

Hearing this, King Kleaver sat up and looked at Dorothy sharply.

"Gristle and fat!" he cried. "Where did this girl come from?" "I found her in the forest and brought her here a prisoner," replied the Captain.

"Why did you do that?" inquired the King, puffing his pipe lazily.

"To create some excitement," the Captain answered. "It is so quiet here that we are all getting rusty for want of amusement. For my part, I prefer to see stirring times."

"Naturally," returned the cleaver, with a nod. "I have always said, Captain, without a bit of irony, that you are a sterling officer and a solid citizen, bowled and polished to a degree. But what do you expect me to do with these prisoners?"

"That is for you to decide," declared the Captain. "You are the King."

"To be sure; to be sure," muttered the cleaver, musingly. "As you say, we have had dull times since the steel and grindstone eloped and left us. Command my Counselors and the Royal Courtiers to attend me, as well as the High Priest and the Judge. We'll then decide what can be done."

The Captain saluted and retired and Dorothy sat down on an overturned kettle and asked:

"Have you anything to eat in your kingdom?"

"Here! Get up! Get off from me!" cried a faint voice, at which his Majesty the cleaver said:

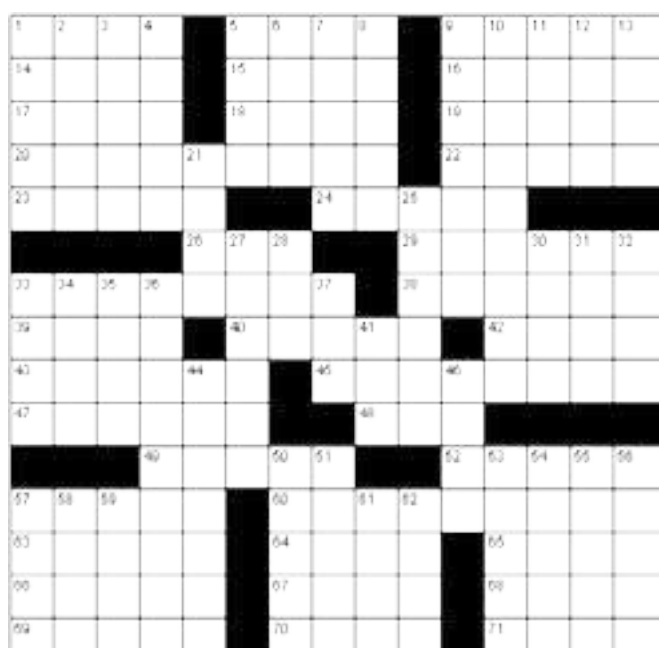

"Excuse me, but you're sitting on my friend the Ten-quart Kettle."

Dorothy at once arose, and the kettle turned right side up and looked at her reproachfully.

"I'm a friend of the King, so no one dares sit on me," said he.

"I'd prefer a chair, anyway," she replied.

"Sit on that hearth," commanded the King.

So Dorothy sat on the hearth-shelf of the big range, and the subjects of Utensia began to gather around in a large and inquisitive throng. Toto lay at Dorothy's feet and Billina flew upon the range, which had no fire in it, and perched there as comfortably as she could.

When all the Counselors and Courtiers had assembled--and these seemed to include most of the inhabitants of the kingdom--the King rapped on the block for order and said:

"Friends and Fellow Utensils! Our worthy Commander of the Spoon Brigade, Captain Dipp, has captured the three prisoners you see before you and brought them here for--for--I don't know what for. So I ask your advice how to act in this matter, and what fate I should mete out to these captives. Judge Sifter, stand on my right. It is your business to sift this affair to the bottom. High Priest Colender, stand on my left and see that no one testifies falsely in this matter."

As these two officials took their places, Dorothy asked: "Why is the colander the High Priest?"

"He's the holiest thing we have in the kingdom," replied King Kleaver.

"Except me," said a sieve. "I'm the whole thing when it comes to holes."

"What we need," remarked the King, rebukingly, "is a wireless sieve. I must speak to Marconi about it. These old-fashioned sieves talk too much. Now, it is the duty of the King's Counselors to counsel the King at all times of emergency, so I beg you to speak out and advise me what to do with these prisoners."

"I demand that they be killed several times, until they are dead!" shouted a pepperbox, hopping around very excitedly.

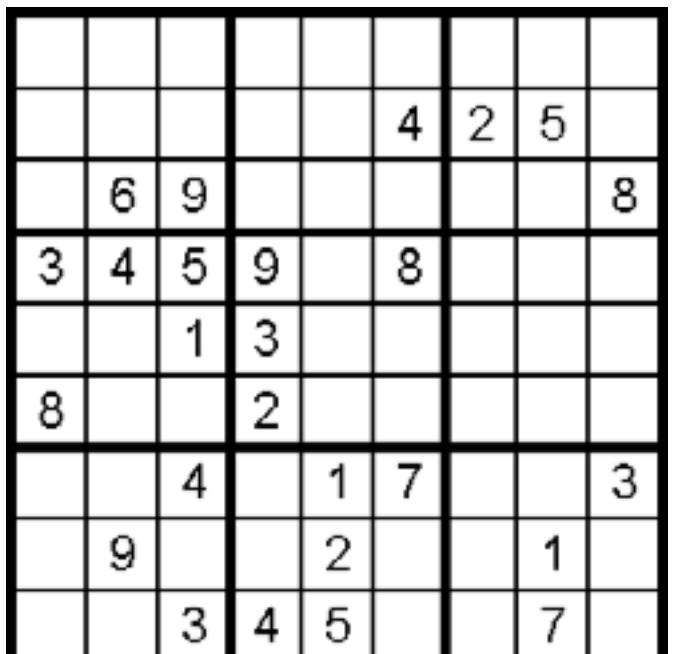

"Compose yourself, Mr. Paprika," advised the King. "Your remarks are piquant and highly-seasoned, but you need a scattering of commonsense. It is only necessary to kill a person once to make him dead; but I do not see that it is necessary to kill this little girl at all."

"I don't, either," said Dorothy.

"Pardon me, but you are not expected to advise me in this matter," replied King Kleaver.

"Why not?" asked Dorothy.
