Eminent Domain: Legal Update and Practical Tips

Why You Need to Attend

- Assess the impact of new and pending case law and legislative changes on eminent domain actions with an insightful exchange from both sides of this pressing issue.
- Understand the distinction between 'for public use' and 'for public benefit' so you can determine if a potential taking is justified.

The Supreme Court's ruling in Kelo v. City of New London has changed the landscape of eminent domain. New rulings have given the government unprecedented legal power to take property – and they have left many property owners outraged. Your legislature is currently debating changes to eminent domain laws intended to clarify the eminent domain requirements and rights to take property. Are you up to date on recent changes and current initiatives? Can you properly handle an eminent domain action – representing either the government or the property owner – under the current and changing legal rules?

At this timely seminar our experienced faculty will provide you with a current, balanced perspective of both sides of this pressing legal issue. Know exactly how the Kelo ruling, current case law and legislative actions in your state will impact you. Examine the delineation between “public use” and “public benefit” and see how the line has been blurred following recent decisions. Take a comparative look at government and property owner rights so you have a well-rounded perspective to apply to whichever side of a case you're asked to represent.
