Mentoring future leaders in nursing needs to be a priority to all nurses in positions of leadership and accountability. This session will focus on how to mentor a diverse group of nurses who think differently than previous generations did. Most Gen X and Millennial nurses plan on having a multitude of jobs throughout their careers, and choose their work assignments with this in mind. Today leadership competencies must include succession planning and strategies to identify and grow the future leaders in healthcare. Discover the key elements that a great leader possesses, and find out what happens when one of these considerations is missing.
