A maximum of $1000 per year is available to support graduate students giving presentations at academic conferences. The maximum amount for each student per year is $250. In any particular year, the program may award conference grants to more than four students if there is additional money available or if fewer than four students were granted a conference award in the previous year.

To qualify for a conference award, the student must be a first author of the presentation or poster. The conference award can be used to cover registration, travel and accommodation expenses and is only awarded AFTER the conference has taken place and receipts have been submitted.

Conference awards can be applied for by submitting this form to the CPSY Program Committee for approval. Proof of acceptance for the presentation by the conference organizers must accompany this application.

You must first receive CPSY Program approval before submitting a Conference Award Payment Request form, along with receipts, to the CPSY Office Coordinator for re-imbursement.
