Friday, April 17, 2015
9:00 a.m - 4:00 pm
Radisson Hotel
125 Denison Pkwy. E., Corning, NY

OUR WORKSHOP

This presentation will enhance your skills with children, adolescents, and adults and increase your practical knowledge of how to apply art therapy, play therapy, neurobiology-focused, and mind-body approaches to trauma intervention. In particular, it will introduce you to trauma-informed expressive arts therapy, why it is a “brain-wise” approach to treatment and how to apply practical strategies to your work with children and adults who have experienced a wide variety of traumatic events and other challenges. The focus of the presentation is to introduce the participant to expressive arts activities designed specifically for children, adults and families who have experienced traumatic events or loss, with an emphasis on trauma-informed practice, resilience, self-regulation, positive attachment and “thriveness.”

KEY LEARNING POINTS

Participants will be able to:

- Define five aspects of trauma-informed practice;
- Define five components of trauma-informed expressive arts therapy;
- Identify three reasons why expressive arts are brain-wise interventions;
- Identify five expressive arts and play-based interventions to enhance self-regulation and increase a sense of safety and positive attachment;
- Identify two expressive arts interventions to enhance resilience and posttraumatic growth;
- Define three major components of the expressive therapies continuum and how they apply to trauma intervention.

WORKSHOP SCHEDULE

The registration table opens at 7:45 am. The workshop runs from 9:00am-4:00pm with a lunch break from 12:00pm-1:00pm. Lunch is not included in the registration fee.
