The Stony Brook School, Homecoming Weekend, October 10-12, 2014

Welcome back to The Brook

As I get older I better understand my mother's bittersweet feelings about holidays. We are a very close-knit family, and she longs for us all to be together. However, with three siblings who are all married and have in-law obligations, it is the rare occasion when everyone is together in the same room. For most holidays, there are unoccupied chairs at the table. So during those times we rejoice together but also long for the sense of connection and completion that a full table brings.

The more time I spend with Stony Brook alumni the more I understand the term Stony Brook family. Each person shares a bond with all other Stony Brook School alumni across the globe. The individuals are as varied as the continents from which they hail; however, they share the familial bond of being Brookers, and that is no small thing. As diverse as you are, the stories of deep relationships with faculty and with each other are a consistent thread. I encourage you to come back and share with each other those memories and stories and reconnect with those who comprise The Stony Brook School family.

This visit will be one that should spark your imagination for the future of The Brook. The construction of our S.T.E.M. Lab will be underway as will the renovation of the pool. You will also see our students—all 345 of them (up from 330 last year)—and our dedicated faculty, who grew in number as well. Of course if you have not yet seen Kanas Commons you will want to do that as well—it has elevated our campus to new heights, and we are all enjoying it immensely.

This is an exciting time at The Brook, and we would love for you to be a part of it. My sincere hope is that everyone receiving this letter will be in attendance and that we will have very few chairs empty at the table. Please don't underestimate the importance of your attendance to your fellow Brookers. Your attendance brings a sense of fullness and completion that is too sweet for words.

Best regards,

Joshua Crane, Head of School
