

Greg Smith

As a Manager do you know your Health and Safety Obligations?

Join us on Wednesday 6 April for a compelling and valuable Management Obligations for Safety and Health workshop run by Greg Smith, Principal of Nexus Law Group.

The legislative focus on the role of senior managers was made abundantly clear during the development and passage of model legislation designed to “harmonise” Australia’s safety and health laws. As part of the package of new laws the concept of “positive” due diligence was imposed on Company Officers, increasing both the expectations on those Officers, and the consequences of non-compliance with the laws.

Based on Greg’s experience working with managers caught up in safety and health investigations and those who end up being prosecuted, it is often the case that they do not properly understand or fully appreciate their legal obligations for safety and health in the workplace.

Attending this workshop, will help you understand what you as manager must do to participate effectively in safety management and develop strong safety culture, while at the same time, managing your legal responsibilities.

The workshop will focus on legal and safety management concepts such as:

- > The minimum expectations that Courts and Tribunals have of managers in the context of safety and health obligations.
- > What is “due diligence”, and how does it influence a managers role in safety and health?
- > What is “reasonably practicable”, and how does it apply to individual managers?
- > How to create and demonstrate an “ALARP” argument.
- > What is “safety culture”, and how does modern thinking about leadership and safety culture relate to management obligations and legal responsibilities?

Greg’s thought provoking workshops are always a sell-out, don’t miss out on your opportunity to hear from an international award winning author and qualified lawyer with over 20 years’ experience specialising in safety and health management.

About the Presenter

Greg Smith is the Principal at Nexus Law Group. He has spent more than two decades specialising in safety and health management, focussing on helping clients to understand organisational and individual responsibility for safety and health, and implement and verify processes to discharge those responsibilities. Greg is an international award winning author and qualified lawyer who has worked as a partner and legal practitioner in some of Australia’s leading law firms. In addition to his legal experience, Greg has worked as the Principal Safety Advisor for Woodside Energy Limited. In that role, he reported to the Vice President Safety and Health, and was responsible for the ongoing development and implementation of Woodside’s global safety management strategy.
