The First Family of La Costa

By, Natalie Pittsford

Immediately upon entering the home of Irving and Muriel Roston, the “first family of La Costa,” I was struck by the hospitality and graciousness of the couple. After 65 years of marriage, you can still see their love for each other, their family, and the life that they built together at La Costa.

Irving Roston was a general contractor in Los Angeles in 1962 when he received a phone call inviting him to Las Vegas to discuss a dream that would eventually become La Costa Resort & Spa. Roston was contracted by the four original partners, Merv Adelson, Mo Dalitz, Irwin Molasky, and Allard Roen to help realize their dream.

When Irving Roston came to La Costa in 1962, El Camino Real Boulevard was a two lane road. Roston negotiated with the city to erect a sign on the freeway for La Costa Avenue, singlehandedly creating a public portal to Southern California’s playground. While ground-breaking commenced for La Costa Resort, Irving Roston began to create the community which would become the heart of La Costa, building 45 homes neighboring the 2,700 acres dedicated for the resort.

As a general partner with Adelson, Dalitz, Molasky, and Roen, Roston oversaw the construction of the Club and the original 18-hole golf course. Roston and his team worked for two years, from first light until last light, seven days a week, until the dream of La Costa was realized. That dream became reality on July 1, 1965 when La Costa Resort & Spa first opened its doors. Roston fondly recalled watching La Costa grow from a dream to a legendary Southern California oasis. After La Costa opened its doors, Irving Roston remained a partner and was intimately involved with the ongoing maintenance of the Club, ensuring that La Costa met the required building codes.

In the early days, La Costa was truly the playground of Hollywood’s rich and famous. Legendary guests, according to Roston, included Jim Garner, Jack Lemmon, Bette Davis, Merv Griffin, and Lucille Ball. Amazingly enough, some of the original staff (from bussers to valet) are still serving La Costa Members and guests decades later.

Author’s Note:

The “first family of La Costa,” Irving and Muriel Roston, are still active Members of the Club and reside within walking distance of the Club. Their children, Mike and Ellen Roston, also Members, live nearby.

Muriel Roston, a talented artist in her own right, is working with the Club’s Membership Team on re-launching the Ladies Luncheon Series with a seminar and art show called “Canvas & Cocktails.”

THE LEGEND CONTINUES...

Kia Classic & Hee Kyung Seo Make La Costa Home

All eyes were on La Costa Resort & Spa March 22nd - March 28th during the Kia Classic Presented by J Golf, the first LPGA event of the season in the United States and the first LPGA event in San Diego since 1993. Hee Kyung Seo, a 23 year-old golfer from South Korea playing with a sponsor's exemption, won the Kia Classic and took home a $255,000 winners check by shooting a 12-under-par 70-69-67-70-276 and beating her nearest opponent by six strokes.

During the trophy ceremony, Seo mentioned that she looked forward to returning to La Costa-next time to relax and enjoy one of Southern California's treasures. Now that dream has become reality. Seo was presented with an honorary five-year Signature Golf membership in The Club at La Costa.

La Costa Golf History Trivia

Did you know that golf at La Costa started out with only 18 holes? When La Costa opened its doors in 1965, golfers were invited to experience the original Dick Wilson 72-par, 7,200 yard championship golf course which covered 215 acres and cost $1.5 million. It was not until 1973 when an additional 9 holes were added, and in 1995 a final 9 holes were added, giving birth to what we know today as the North and South courses.
