Fellowships will be given to qualified family and consumer sciences education graduate students who are citizens of the United States to promote further education and professional development within family and consumer sciences education. (Number and value of fellowships granted is based on the previous year's interest earned in the ACTE-Family and Consumer Sciences Graduate Fellowship account.)

Applications with all supporting credentials and references should be received by November 8.

In order to promote minority participation and leadership at least one fellowship will be awarded to a minority applicant, if applicable. Minority shall be defined as African-American, Hispanic-American, Native-American, or Asian American descent. If you wish to be considered as a minority applicant, check the box below and identify the minority group you represent in the blank provided.
