Why American Apparel?

More than just a “sweatshop-free” charity.

We are committed to making clothing of the highest quality while pioneering industry standards of social responsibility in the workplace.

A young company

American Apparel is a youth-directed company, founded without the assistance of institutional investors. Having no political ties, the company has rejected established norms on all sides; we've dismissed both the corporate right and the politically correct left in favor of something new.

Best quality and fit

Rather than follow seasonal trends, we offer an expansive year-round line to which we are continuously introducing new styles and colors. Our priority is quality and fit, and we often turn to our consumers for feedback and ideas.

A new business model

Internalized production, where all stages of manufacturing happen in the same building, is far more efficient than the industry norm of outsourcing. Our workers earn the highest wages in the industry and are active participants in the life of the company.

Setting an example

American Apparel is as much a capitalist success as a social success. The company's profitability is a testament to the fact that the model can be applied to many companies and industries worldwide.

A sustainable choice

American Apparel's Sustainable Edition offers our most popular styles in certified organic cotton. In the next few years we intend to further integrate sustainable cotton (principally organic) into our general production. We've also implemented a program by which we recycle over a million pounds of fabric scraps each year.

Made in Downtown LA

Under one roof

American Apparel is a vertically integrated manufacturer and retailer. This means that we've consolidated all stages of production under one roof at our downtown Los Angeles factory—from the cutting and sewing of the garment, right through to the photography and marketing.

Ultimately it is vertical integration which, by cutting out the middleman, allows the company to be sweatshop free. Given that no outsourcing to local or developing-nation sweatshops occurs, the process is time efficient and the company can respond at breakneck speed to demand. This enables us to be competitive within the global market.

For American Apparel, being sweatshop free means offering all of our employees, sewing and administrative alike, basic benefits. We provide affordable healthcare for workers and their families, company-subsidized lunches, bus passes, free ESL classes, on-site masseurs, free parking, proper lighting and ventilation, and the most up-to-date equipment (the latest cutting machine, or the latest software).

We offer these as a matter of policy, not only because we care about our workers, but also because we understand that a positive work environment is a more productive one.

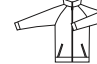

Most importantly, we pay the highest wages in the garment industry (the average sewer earns $13/hour but this can be as high as $25/hour), we offer year-round employment and job security, with the goal of lifetime employment. There is virtually no turnover when it comes to our garment workers, and their loyalty to the company is a huge source of pride.

Finally, vertical integration means that we can supply the highest-quality product on the market. Because our clothing is manufactured on site, we have superior quality control. We have the freedom to make changes and improvements to our garments without the delays experienced by companies that outsource.

That's how we bring our customers the clothing they love to wear. In the end, our goal is to provide a positive experience to everyone touched by our business process, from a sewing operator right through to a consumer.

Printability

The difference between our cotton and the cotton of other leading brands is the quality of the yarn and its finer size. Our combed ringspun cotton is crafted from 30-singles yarn knitted on a 28-gauge knitting machine, and as a result is noticeably softer and higher in quality.

Ours

Combed-Cotton Fibers

The combing process separates 80% of the more desirable (longer, thinner, more even) fibers from the less desirable (shorter, coarser, less consistent) fibers.

Ringspun/30-Single Yarn

A higher count of thinner fibers are tightly twisted together to make a stronger, smoother, finer (30) gauge thread.

30-singles yarn

30-singles yarn is woven on a 28-gauge machine, producing a finer knit fabric that is softer and lighter to touch.

Theirs

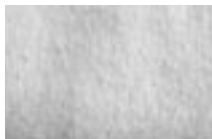

Carded-Cotton Fibers

Carded cotton is a mixture of ragged, thicker, short fibers. Cheaper for manufacturers to produce, this cotton is rough, heavy, and lower in quality.

Open-Ended/18-Single Yarn

Fewer coarser fibers are blown together, resulting in a loosely bound, thicker (18) gauge, heavier, rougher thread.

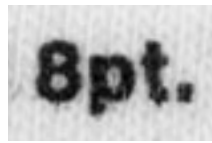

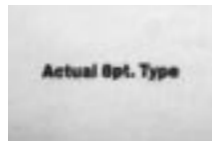

Coarser 20-Gauge Weave

Most cotton jersey is created on a 20-gauge knitting machine. The result is a looser knit, heavier material that is coarse to touch.

American Apparel has the best quality fabrics and styles for screen printing and other embellishments. Each style's 30-singles combed ringspun cotton surface is exceptionally smooth and tight-knit, making for a superior canvas to adorn.

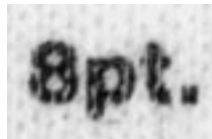

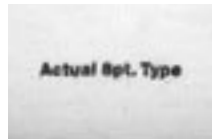

Ours

Superior Printability

Our 30-singles combed ringspun cotton fabric is the best possible surface for high-resolution screen printing, embroidery, and embellishment.

Theirs

Printability

The 18-singles open-ended cotton used by other leading brands does not yield comparable results to what can be achieved when using our fabric.

25% of U.S. pesticide use occurs during the cotton cultivation process, so we're offering a more sustainable choice.

Pesticide use doesn't only harm the environment. According to the National Cancer Institute, it is suspected of causing 10,000 deaths per year. The Sustainable Edition is American Apparel's initial response to this crisis.

Initiating a new effort

We are beginning a program to integrate organic cotton into our production process. This is taking place at two levels: (1) the Sustainable Edition offers an organic version of 10 of our most popular styles, in a natural color; (2) we will incorporate organic cotton into our general cotton supply in the coming years.

Additional environmental outreach

We recycle over a million pounds of fabric scraps annually and manufacture garments such as our Baby Rib Thong (style 4313) from leftover fabric pieces. We also recycle cardboard and office paper, and are exploring other ways of becoming more environmentally friendly.
