

CHEW TOYS

To Hell With Georgia • Tuesday, November 21, 2006

CLASSES CANCELLED

U[sic]GA president announced the cancellation of spring semester after the football sesason's woeful start. Page 20

COWS TIPPED OFF

An army of angry cows attacked campus after students went cow tipping late Friday night. Page 9

Student Government bans foreign alcohol

By Lucinda Vajnyer
AA Graduate, 2 Hours Sober

In response to recent problems including mispronunciation and difficulty finding foreign beer in kegs, the U[sic]GA Student Government has recently passed legislation to ban foreign beer. Difficulty in acquiring the beer and an inability to acquire enough funds to afford the more expensive beer added to SGA's preference for American beer.

"We just can't take it that them furrin' beers are chargin' us so much fur our basic needs," said U[sic]GA president Mike Adams.

Many students have tried to acquire beers like Delirium Tremens, Kirin, Singha, Sapporo, Dos Equis, and Chimay. However, students have not only had difficulty affording these beers, but also they have been unable to order them in local bars and liquor stores.

"I done gone to the lickastore and I done tried to order some of that thar furriner beer, but I couldn't read the label on the package," said fifth year Alcohol Awareness major and beer

"I feel like every time I take a sip from my Natty Lite that I am doing my civic duty."

Anita Colbier
Second-year MRS major

aficionado Bernie Sensation

Along with these difficulties, there are many other students who do not feel that the foreign beer reflects their interests or tastes.

"Why would I want to buy this different beer when I can get a case of Natty for the same price," said freshman economics student Ty Twad.

"I done tried to chug that foreign beer, but it did not have the normal water taste that I was used to," continued Bart Indar, second year Health and Physical Education major. "Also, I tried drinking my normal 20-30 beers last night and I barely lived to tell about it after drinking some of these foreign flavors."

While this will have little impact on the amount of consumption of beer on campus, it will certainly boost demand for domestic beers and drive up profit revenues for America's breweries.

"I feel like every time I take a sip from my Natty Lite that I am doing my civic duty," said Anita Colbier, a second year Management and Residence Studies major.

By Buster Indechops / STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

U[sic]GA students no longer have to feel ashamed for their inability to correctly pronounce the names of foreign beers when ordering.

Theatre program performs O.C. reruns

By Ilene Dover / STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

The Department of Theatre and Film Studies has decided to run twelve miniplays reenacting The O.C. reruns in lieu of Shakespeare.

By Ann Drogeny
Thespian Lover

The U[sic]GA Department of Theatre and Film Studies has announced its lineup of theater productions for this coming spring, and boy is it a doozy.

According to Doug Benson, head of the department, they will be running twelve mini-plays over the course of the year reenacting the entire previous season of "The O.C."

"Look, we're sick and tired of trying to figure out what the hell is supposed to be going on with this Shakespeare crap," Benson said. "It's all a bunch of nancy boys running around in tights talking about bees and putting donkey heads on. Do you have any idea how much trouble we got in with those PETA bastards?"

I mean, how the hell else were we supposed to get a donkey's head?"

Benson is referring to a 2004 incident in which several area farms were raided by theater majors in search of costumes for the Fall production of A Midsummer Night's Dream.

"So we decided, 'screw it.' It's not like anybody comes when we do that ye oldy[sic] crap anyway. Plus, this way, we don't even have to read scripts. We can just watch the DVDs until every word of the show is burned into our brains. Hell, half of us have already done that anyway. We're going to get one of those nerds from Tech to play Seth Cohen anyway. We can take care of the self-obsessed girls and guys ourselves."

Benson later shared that these elite few would likely be getting the leads.

Despite widespread cries of pandering to the lowest common denominator within the theater community at large, students and professors at U[sic]GA are delighted by the addition of "The O.C." to the Spring line-up.

Dr. William Levinway, a professor within the department hailed the decision.

"I'll level with you. I always hated that artsy stuff. Who needs some high fallutin' bull turd play about some crappy salesman when we could be watching total hotties get nekkid on the beach?" said Levinway.

The primary qualification listed on the casting fliers being posted around campus is "No Fatties."

Though this obviously disqualifies the hopeful U[sic]GA cheerleading squad, other sorostitutes around campus remain optimistic.

Dog book mandatory reading for new freshmen

Class of 2011 required to read Clifford story before fall classes begin in late August

By Harry Paratestes
Advocate for pseudoliteracy

We, the students of the University [sic] of Georgia, has chosen our favorite book of all time.

This book has it all: drama, action, suspense, love, but most importantly, a big, red dog.

The book, if ya ain't done guessed it yet, is Clifford the Big Red Dog.

And last Thursday, the English Department decided that they were gonna make next years freshmens read this book over the summer, and then come back to school and talk about it.

I think this is cool, cuz you can only have so much fun with your cuzzins and goats before you get chafed and need something else to do until the keggers start back in Augustober.

We can forgive him for not being a bulldog. I mean, nobody hates goats just because they're not bulldogs.

At least Clifford is a dog, and you've got to admit, he has an amazing fashion sense.

The story starts with a little girl going to get a puppy for her birthday.

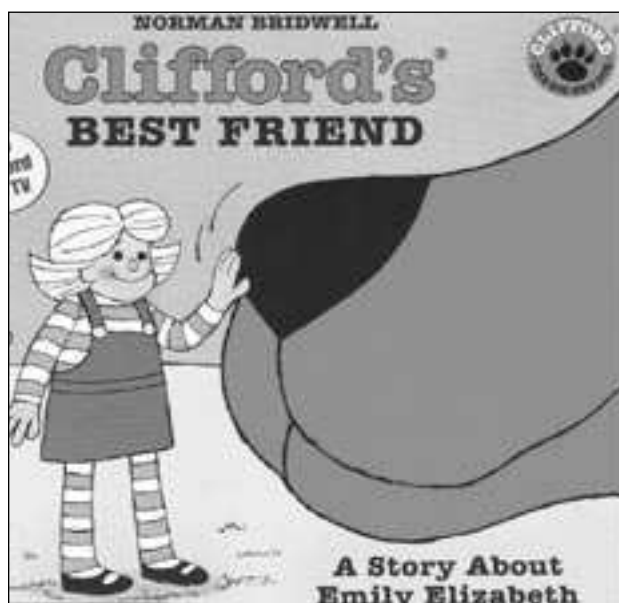

Already, you like this girl. What better present is there than a dog. She chooses the runt of a puppy litter.

Now, I'm sure most people would question her judgment here.

First of all, why would you want a dog that ain't no bulldog?

And C, why would you want one that is small.

It turns out she weres a smart one,

him to.

In fact, he grows to over 25 feet tall.

That's bigger than the broadside of a barn.

However, this becomes a problem because the little girl lives in the city, and, as we all know, there ain't no place for a big dog in a city.

Luckily, the girl's parents arent reall observient, and they sees how much their little girl kin loves that hound, and so they decides to move to the country.

This one seemed like a no-brainer to me.

I mean, if you have a ho-down in a city, it usually means somebody got shot.

This is a great book for any U[sic]GA students, faculty or aluminums.

The only problem is that the book has a fairly high reading level.

There are words on several pages, which kindagot me cunfuzed atferst, buy I called 'my sis, and she came over and we "studied".'

Alright, ye got me. She got to learning me some stuff that they dont really teach in books, and i jus' gave up. I never really figured out what happened, and my sis couldn't neither.

But this Clifford books got pictures, and there's lotsa red, so I think its cool.

I think if the words start to confuse you, the pictures will help you figure out what's goin on. If not, tutoring sessions will be provided for free on Monday nights in the library from seven to nine.

Campus fashion follows Hollywood trends

Celebrity pregnancy craze incites new style statements in maternity wear

By Sumtin Inmabelli
Staff Rider

Fat is the new phat and UGA sisters are bulging with the times with surprising new wardrobes.

A new generation of expecting celebrity role models has undergraduates flocking to follow suit, quite literally. The number of teen pregnancies at UGA is on the rise and students couldn't be happier.

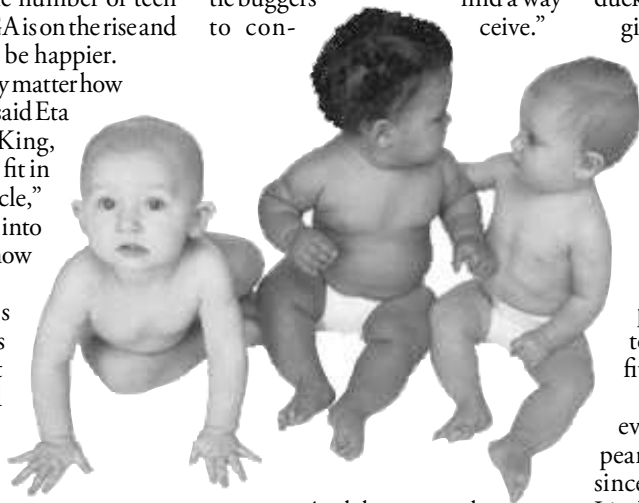

"It doesn't really matter how we get pregnant," said Eta Pi sister Suri Joe King, "as long as we can fit in to our social circle," noting that fitting into her old wardrobe now takes a back seat.

"None of us are social outcasts when we all get knocked up and can bond," she said.

Her Eta Pi friend, sophomore Connie Dumbless said that women in her sorority love buying new clothes and that being with child was a perfect way to adapt to the latest hip fashion trends.

GAP and Old Navy have jumped onto the trend as well with oversized mannequins that literally broke the mold and aggressive new add campaigns targeting un-impregnated, unwed teens. An advertising analyst said the un-impregnated teens were the biggest market size for her client. "Once those little &%*#ers get pregnant, they are going to shop at our store anyway, so it is our job within the Georgia Law to ensure these little buggers find a way to conceive."

And the expected payoffs have trumped any initial hesitations due to the number of young women needing chic new apparel to accommodate their burgeoning bellies. With slogans like "It's never too late to get laid," and "Listen to your hormones," maternity clothes have never been so sailor-friendly.

The new add campaigns stress the ease of insemination and the availability of sperm from myriad sources.

"I mean it's like as easy as it could be," Dumbless said. "All we have to do it get pregnant. What could be easier at a place like Georgia? (besides duck hunting and drinking?)" she giggled adding that doing all three at once was the coup de grace of a social outcast status.

However, some freshmen don't have it so easy. Some choose to be different and must put up with the daily ridicule and ostracism.

Others told our reporters they have resorted to faking pregnancies to fit in.

"I have been stuffing everything from Styrofoam peanuts to pillows under my blouse since August," said freshman S. Linda Waste.

But in recent days her attitude has changed considerably. "I don't need to resort to these billowing tactics anymore," she said gleefully explaining her recent pregnancy. "[Having her baby] is the difference between night and day for my social life."

This new baby has helped her get into Eta Pi and begin to develop bonds with fellow sisters that will help her raise her child. But for Waste, it's more about the journey than the end. The important thing here, to fitting in, is being pregnant she said, not actually having a baby.

Using the extent of her mathematics background she calculated she would only need to get pregnant five to seven times before graduation to "keep her look current." She said the has-been pregnant look was worse than the pre-pregnant one. "Once people know you can get pregnant, they come to expect it of you," she said.

When asked about the father, Waste was ambivalent.

"I'm not really sure who he was," she said rattling off a list of 60 plus potential candidates including Uga himself. "I had to be sure it would work so I didn't take any chances," Waste said.

2007 Georgia Tech Business Plan Competition

Do you have the next great venture idea?
Do you need a team to help turn your idea into reality?

Announcing the 2006-2007 BPC Workshop Series

- Come to learn. . .
- Meet other entrepreneurs. . .
- Find team members. . .

The BPC is open to all Georgia Tech students and alums who have graduated in the past 5 years.

The workshop schedule includes:

- Nov. 28: Deadline to Register for Mentorship Programs
- Nov. 29: Developing Venture Strategies
- Jan. 17: Writing a Winning Venture Plan
- Jan. 24: Financing Your Venture
- Jan. 31: Presenting a Winning Venture Plan
- Feb 16-23: Competitions and Receptions

All workshop sessions will be held from 6:00 to 7:30 p.m. in Room 203, College of Management, Technology Square

Experience Entrepreneurship

In the 2006 Competition, over $18,000 in cash and $40,000 in legal, financial and design awards were presented to Georgia Tech teams.

For Competition or Workshop information email: bizplan@mgt.gatech.edu

Drunk Rambles

Anywhere on U[sic]GA campus

I love 'em thick girlz. They remind me of my momma'. And they think my trackters sexy.
I love it when I can make her scream "Moo".
I wish we had easier majors.
The arch...It's kinda like a ramblin wreck
I wish we had easier majors. Turf Management is really whoopin' my ass.
Edward 40-hands is my favorite game.
Bessie- I love you. Will you be my wife?

See page 18 for more Drunk Rambles!

Pizza * Wings * Calzones * Salads * Stromboli * Breadsticks
FAST DELIVERY! BEST PIZZA!

$1.50 Delivery Fee

Hours: Sun 12-10 pm, Mon- Thurs 11-11 pm
Fri- Sat. 11- midnight
151 14th Street
Office Depot /CVS Plaza

Call Now! 404-874-4445

or order online at www.campusfoods.com
Visit us at www.allstarpizzaco.com for full menu and more deals!

Super Student Steal!

14" Large
1 topping pizza
only $4.99!

(For campus delivery or carry-out only.)

Unlimited use! Expires Nov. 23, 2006

Super Student Steal!

14" Large
1 topping pizza
only $4.99!

(For campus delivery or carry-out only.)

Unlimited use! Expires Nov. 23, 2006

Super Student Steal!

14" Large
1 topping pizza
only $4.99!

(For campus delivery or carry-out only.)

Unlimited use! Expires Nov. 23, 2006

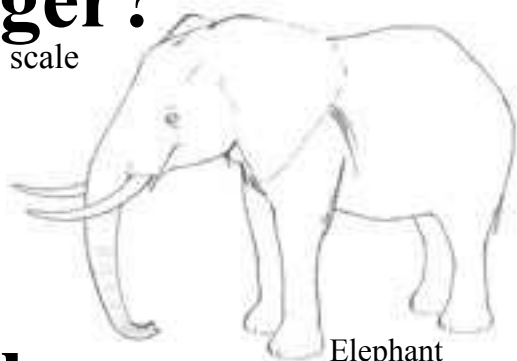

Stuff to do when the beers are gone

Which is larger?

Note: images not drawn to scale

Black-eyed Pea

Elephant

Themed Cross“word”: The Letter A

Across

1. The first letter of the alphabet. Also, an article (like the, but not).

Down

1. “At” minus “t”. Also, a grade you will never receive on a report card.

Word Search

Find the hidden word. Note: XXX is not a word.

```

X X X X X X X X X
X X X X X X X X X
X X X X X X X X X
X X X X X X X X X
X X D A W G S X X
X X X X X X X X X
X X X X X X X X X
X X X X X X X X X
X X X X X X X X X

```

Word Jumble

Rearrange the letters to form real English words

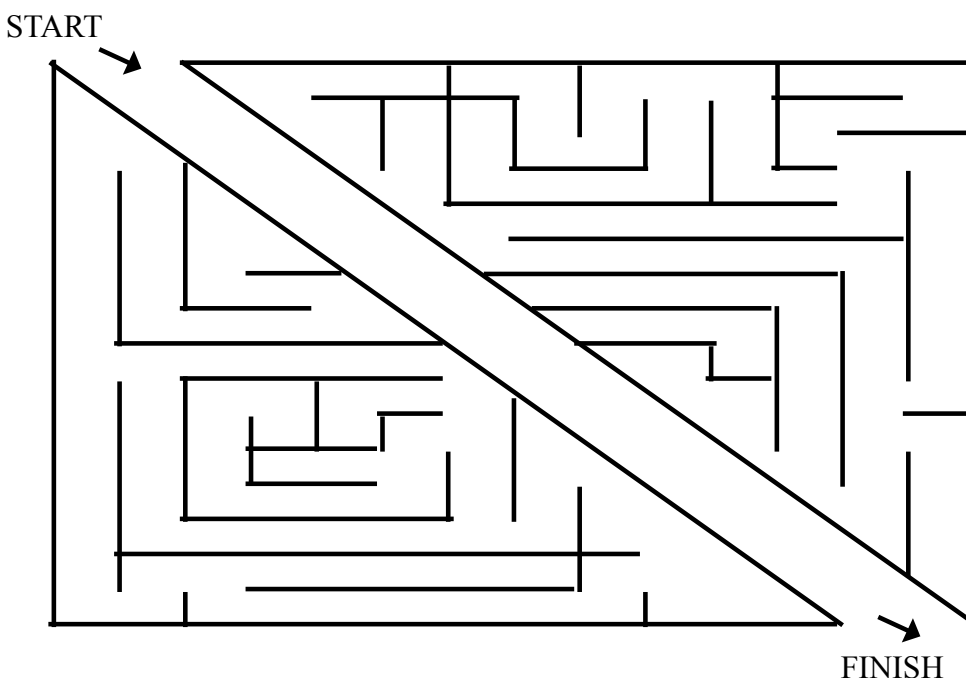

GOERGIA _____

BULLDGO _____

FOOTBLAL _____

Maze

Can you find your way through the puzzling maze? It's okay to use your eraser.

What's the Good Word?

Georgia Tech NROTC

Looking for a challenge?

Want to really do something with your life?

GT NROTC is looking for motivated and qualified students to apply for scholarships and non-scholarship positions. Visit the following websites to see if you qualify:

<https://www.nrotc.navy.mil>
<http://nrotc.gatech.edu>

Student Center Programs Council
www.fun.gatech.edu

Weekly Activities

Student Center Programs Council
www.fun.gatech.edu

CRAFT FAIR
 Find the perfect gift or something for yourself!
 Wednesday- Friday
 December 6 - 8, 9:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
 Georgia Tech Student Center
 A great place to find one-of-a-kind gifts that fit your holiday budget!

Thanksgiving Holiday
 November 23 & 24

BACK BY POPULAR DEMAND!
MIDNIGHT BREAKFAST
FREE FULL BREAKFAST FOR GT STUDENTS
 Tuesday, December 12
 Student Center Food Court
 10:00 p.m. - 12:00 midnight
 • For guaranteed admission, get a timed ticket in the Student Center Programs Area from now until 4:00 p.m. on event day
 • Some walk-ins will be admitted as food supplies allow Servers: Campus Faculty and Staff members. Funded by SLAB

JOIN IN THE FUN!!!
 Help plan events including concerts, lectures, art shows, comedians, movies and more. Past events include Sting Break, Mythbusters, Paul Rusesbagina, Take A Prof To Lunch, Murder Mystery Dinners, and great movies such as: "Pirates of the Caribbean," & "The Da Vinci Code."
 For more information or to join go to: www.fun.gatech.edu

Happy Holidays
Seasons Greetings
 Enjoy your Break!
 December 18 - January 2

FOR MORE INFORMATION ON ALL THESE EVENTS AND MORE VISIT OUR WEBSITE: WWW.FUN.GATECH.EDU