MEHA News

Spring 2015 Newsletter

President's Message

Hello MEHA members!

We are well into spring now and I had hoped to get this out newsletter out earlier. I am glad that I waited. We have an opening on the MEHA board and this is the perfect way to ask for nominations. We would like to congratulate Mose Crockett. He has accepted a position in the private sector as a Safety Manager. He was serving as our Vice-President so that position is open. We have several committee chair positions that need to be filled as well (See page 3). Nominations for these positions can be sent to drschnei@gocolumbiamo.com.

The conference is returning for its second year at the Country Club Hotel and Spa in Lake Ozark. It is a beautiful property that has some great views, tennis courts, swimming pools, on-site dining and a fitness room. I encourage you to check out their accommodations at <http://www.countryclubhotel.com/index.asp>.

We have some great speakers lined up. Our Keynote Speaker is Darin Detwiler, the Senior Policy Coordinator at Stop Foodborne Illness (stopfoodborneillness.org). Since the death of his young son from E.coli O157:H7 in 1993, Darin has participated in the support and reform of food policy in the United States. Four different Secretaries of Agriculture have recognized Mr. Detwiler for his efforts in consumer education, the Food Safe Handling Label program, and other elements of the USDA's Pathogen Reduction Program. From 2004-2007, Darin served on the USDA's National Advisory Committee on Meat and Poultry Inspection. With more than 20 years of Food Safety & Quality experience, Darin has been working cross-functionally to bring issues directly to a variety of stakeholders. He's developed and facilitated food safety training programs in schools, at national conventions, and for the public in order to ensure awareness and understanding of food safety issues.

Also coming to speak is Dr. Mansour Samadpour, the chief executive of the Institute of Environmental Health. Dr. Samadpour will give two presentations, one on food fraud and another, on pathogen and allergen and how his company performs these services. Dr. Samadpour and the Institute of Environmental Health were recently featured in this article in the New York Times. <http://www.nytimes.com/2015/04/05/business/private-eyes-in-the-grocery-aisles.html?emc=eta1&r=2>

We also have Rebecca Steiner speaking on two topics, food borne illness at Kaufmann Stadium during the World Series of 2014 and surveying food establishments' satisfaction with inspection programs. We also have Kevin Kennedy coming to speak about Healthy Homes. Diane Paisley of Schnucks Markets will be speaking about plans for extended power outages in food establishments.

These speakers and many more are going to make this the most informative Annual Education Conference we have had in recent years. For those of you who like BBQ, we will be serving up some at hospitality this year, Kansas City Style!

Question and Answer Session: The fall conference would like to present a question and answer period. Send us your questions now and we will be prepared with answers and audience participation to find out jurisdictional differences. Why does Dollar General not have to have a sink where they can get water for cleaning out reach in coolers and wiping off shelves? Are the blue loose fitting gloves at McDonalds magical since they do not wash hands before putting them on? Does your pool ordinance extend to apartment complexes and housing divisions? These are questions that were asked at the last conference. Questions can be submitted to dsees@jacksongov.org or drschnei@gocolumbiamo.com.

I hope this gives you all a glimpse into what we have in store for our conference this fall. I think it is going to be highly educational. Have a great summer and we look forward to seeing you all in the fall.

Thank you,

Dan Schneiderjohn
