

Management and Leadership Academy Series & Educators Workshop Series

“The students walking into classrooms today are radically different than those we taught 20, 15 and even 10 years ago. Having grown up with the Internet, digital TV and computer games, even young kids arrive with a very different idea of how they learn and new expectations of information delivery. To draw these learners in and help them maximize their potential, we need to use instructional strategies that more closely match their fast, exciting and instantly gratifying world.”

Course Objectives ...

Management Academy Series: According to the National Center for Education Statistics (2003), every day from September to June some 53.5 million students in the U.S. walk into classes that teach English, mathematics, science, history and geography and face the daunting task of learning new content. The most straightforward way to enhance students' academic background knowledge is to provide academically enriching experiences for educators, particularly targeted to those they come into contact with on a daily basis.

Educators Workshop ... Mary Bigler Series: The goal of the Educators Workshop 'Mary Bigler' series is to bring literacy to the forefront of discussion among educators. Each program in the series focuses on essential components of reading and engaging students in meaningful dialogue between colleagues. Evidence-based research supporting strategies that assist students in comprehending narrative and expository text will be covered in a way which enlightens both teachers and the students coming under their instruction.

Educators Workshop Series: The Educators Workshop series provides a learning atmosphere where participants can achieve actual methods which work in the classroom in an accelerated learning environment. The program focuses on topics which are faced by teachers and administrators on a daily basis and solutions are offered for dealing successfully with the issue in order to move forward.

Leadership Academy Series: The Leadership Academy deals with subjects critical to the survival not only of education but to the educators who administer the process. The class focuses on issues continually highlighted in importance by the Nation's media under the auspices that what education does not create, it must solve. The professionals engaged are prepared to help Michigan's educators deal successfully with their solutions.

Online Issues in Education Series: The newest program series identifies important issues at all levels of education. Discussion among students will focus on questions and answers which educators can use to meet the daily challenges faced both in the classroom and at the central office level to prevent mistakes from the past occurring again in the future.

Registration takes place online and by fax. To register online, go to www.misd.net, select course offerings, select online registration, select view by category and select Academies. Payment for both MISD registration and SB-CEUs can be made online by credit card.

To register by fax, fill out the following completely and fax to 586.286.2307. Circle your selection.
