The event will take place at the Tulsa Community College, NE Campus, 3727 E. Apache, in Tulsa. This year's theme is "Building Soils for a Secure Future."

The show is open to the public and growers from Arkansas, Oklahoma and surrounding states.

Jeff Moyer, a world-renowned authority in organic agriculture and interim executive director at Rodale Institute in Kutztown, Pennsylvania, will serve as the keynote speaker. His expertise includes organic crop production systems with a focus on weed management, equipment modification and use, cover crops, crop rotations and facilities design.

He also is well-known for conceptualizing and popularizing the No Till Roller Crimper for use in organic agriculture.

Attendees also will have the opportunity to take part in concurrent educational sessions covering topics such as vegetable varieties; farm safety; time management on the farm; health benefits of fruit consumption; using row covers for insect pest and pollinator management; native pollinators; Oklahoma Proven 2016 plant selections; fruit tree nutrition, and more.

AREA DEATH

Karen Sue Hull

Mrs. Hull died Nov. 20 in Oklahoma City. She was born Aug. 23, 1955, in Wurzburg, Germany. She was a registered nurse and worked for Russell-Murray Hospice for many years.

She was a member of Greenfield First Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, Lewis Hull of El Reno; her parents, T.W. and Cozetta Lesperance; sister, Sherry Cowan of Greenfield; two stepchildren, Theresa Kaulao of Dallas, Texas, and John Hull of Tucson, Ariz.; brother, Tom Lesperance of Clinton; and three step-grandchildren.

Bible Verse

"For everything that was written in the past was written to teach us, so that through endurance and the encouragement of the Scriptures we might have hope."

— Romans 15:4

Thoughts on Today's Verse...

If the Bible is a love story, then its theme is hope. No matter how dire the circumstances, no matter how big the enemy, no matter how deep the sin, no matter how lost the people, no matter how empty the cupboard, no matter how wide the river, no matter ... God repeatedly gives his people reason to hope in a brighter tomorrow. Then God brought the assurance of that tomorrow in Jesus!

My Prayer...

Eternal God, please give me patience and endurance

Jihadis

established pattern of religious bias within his administration. For example:

When inviting scores of Muslim representatives to the State Department is in the habit of denying visas to solitary Christian representatives.

When a few persecuted Iraqi Christians crossed the border into the U.S., they were thrown in prison for several months and then sent back to the lion's den to be enslaved, raped, or murdered.

When the Nigerian government waged a strong offensive against Boko Haram, killing some of its terrorists, Secretary of State John Kerry fumed and called for the "human rights" of the jihadis (who regularly slaughter and rape Christians and burn their churches). More recently, Kerry "urged Tajikistan not to go overboard in its crackdown on Islam."

When persecuted Coptic Christians planned on joining Egypt's anti-Muslim Brotherhood revolution of 2013, the U.S. said no.

When persecuted Iraqi and Syrian Christians asked for arms to join the opposition fighting ISIS, D.C. refused.

When the UN Security Council held a meeting to discuss the genocide against Christians and other minorities, although "many high level delegations from UN member states addressed the Security Council meeting, some at the Foreign Minister level, the United States failed to send ... a high ranking member of the State Department."

Most recently, as the White House works on releasing a statement accusing ISIS of committing genocide against religious minorities such as Yazidis — who are named and recognized in the statement — Obama officials are arguing that Christians "do not appear to meet the high bar set out in the genocide treaty" and thus likely not be mentioned.

In short, and to use the president's own words, it is the Obama administration's own foreign and domestic policies that are "shameful," that are "not American," and that do not represent "who we are."

Yet the question remains: Will Americans take notice and do anything about their leader's policies—which welcome Islamic jihadis while ignoring their victims—or will their indifference continue until they too become victims of the jihad, in a repeat of Paris or worse?

Raymond Ibrahim is author of Crucified Again: Exposing Islam's New War on Christians.

DAVE SAYS:

How do you have a wedding without debt?

Dear Dave,
How do you have a wedding without debt?

— Lynn

Dear Lynn,
Wow, where do I start on this one? I guess the best way is to tell the truth. Honey, that question kind of makes you sound like a little princess.

How do you have a wedding without debt? It's really simple. You have a wedding with the money you have. There's nothing wrong with small, inexpensive weddings. And once you accept that and start thinking about things from a mature, adult point of view, you'll start realizing you can scrimp and save and have a really nice, small wedding.

Lots of people have beautiful, memorable ceremonies and even small receptions for less than $1,000. Sure, you can run out, go into debt and wear an $8,000 wedding dress for a few hours on one day of your life. Or, you can find one that's much cheaper — even something that's been worn one time — for a couple hundred dollars. Think that's tacky? Well, let me tell you what's even more tacky and dumb — going $15,000 to $20,000 in debt for one day!

To have a wedding without debt you have to be creative and think within your budget. That means growing up and not throwing a temper tantrum just because you can't have every little thing you want. Most people don't have lavish, expensive weddings, and guess what? Years down the road they're still married, madly in love and laughing and hugging when they remember the best day of their lives.

Please, don't turn what's supposed to be a happy occasion into a financial mess that will take years to clean up!

— Dave

What to do with restricted stock?

Dear Dave,
My husband works for a large company and receives restricted stock bonuses of approximately $5,000 each year. We're not sure exactly how long they're restricted, and we both wonder if we're allowed to sell these options?

— Patty

Dear Patty,
You said your husband works for a large company, so my guess is they do this as an employee retention move. That's why they restrict the stock. They're trying to get people to stay with the company, and you'll only be able to sell them after they are no longer restricted.

Usually, these kinds of things have a one- or two-year restriction. I doubt they'd put a five-year hold on it, but check with the company to find out the specifics. They can tell him when the stock is free to be sold.

If it were me, I wouldn't hold on to too much of it.

I don't own single stocks. They have too much risk for my taste. Keep a little bit, if you want, but don't put all or even most of your financial eggs into that one basket!
