Business Briefs

If you walk into a Dead River Company office any Wednesday in September, don't be confused. It's not "casual Friday." It's "Blue Jeans Wednesday."

Through Sept. 26, Dead River Company will support "Hunger Awareness Month" in all 57 of its Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts service areas, giving employees an opportunity to donate a dollar to wear blue jeans to work. The money donated by employees will be matched dollar for dollar by Dead River Company.

In Maine, donations will be given to Good Shepherd Food Bank.

So far this year, the company has donated more than $250,000 to food assistance programs that serve thousands of families in need.

"This is a company-wide effort," said Bob Moore, president and CEO of Dead River Company. "We made a commitment to help people in the communities we serve, and our employees have embraced it completely – donating food and their time at local food banks. We thought 'Blue Jeans Wednesdays' would be an easy way for them to take part."
