Focus – Mauchline Ware and the Connections with the Paisley Thread Industry:

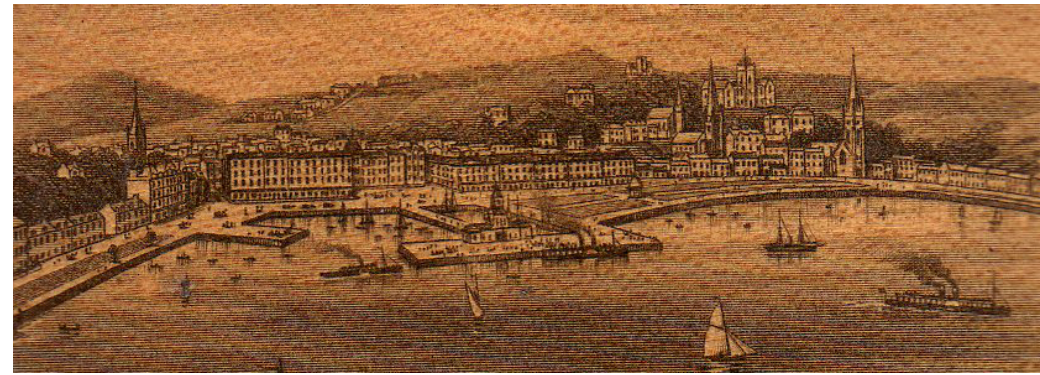

The Hotel is some 5 miles from Paisley town centre, and has been chosen to allow us to:

- visit one of the last surviving mill buildings and the Thread Museum located there;
- learn more of the work carried on there and the connections with the box-makers;
- look at the work and living conditions of the cottage weavers; and
- investigate how the Clark Brothers and the Coats enriched their town with public buildings.

There will be opportunities to see the Clark-built Town Hall, and to visit the Coats Museum with its wonderful display of Paisley Shawls, the Observatory and the Thomas Coats Memorial Church, (sometimes known as the Baptist Cathedral), all splendid examples of Victorian munificence at its best.

The Programme:

During our stay on the Clyde, we propose to look at the way in which the Clyde and the tourist industry promoted by the Clyde steamers, gave rise to a wide range of different transfer scenes; also to look at the rich variety of Mauchline thread containers produced for the Paisley companies. The Friday will be spent in Paisley. Then on the Saturday morning there will be a half-day visit to the famous Burrell Collection on the outskirts of Glasgow. For any preferring to enjoy the fresh air, Pollock Park, where the Burrell is situated, has been famous for its spring flowers and rhododendrons for many years. As always, members' displays and talks will be key features of the weekend. Our Gala dinner will take place on the Saturday evening, and on Sunday morning we will again enjoy the excitement of our Convention Fair.

Bookings:

As always, this event is a major undertaking for the Club, which has already paid out a considerable sum to reserve our accommodation. At this time we would ask you to reserve places and to pay an initial non-returnable deposit of £25 per person, to be set against the final conference fee covering outings etc. As on previous occasions, while the Club will make reservations for members en bloc, members require to settle their own accounts on departure. Members booking should note that any cancellations made within the two week period prior to the Convention will be charged at full rate. Such payments are the responsibility of the individual members, and you are advised to consider insurance cover for such a necessity.
