

AUTO-SLEEPERS ARISE

Martin Chapman looks at a Limited Edition range of VW T4-based motorcaravans, whilst Graham Hambly reports on the birth of the Vivanti line-up

Trident, Trooper and Topaz are all offered in LE form, with alloy wheels and metallic paint as standard.

Cloth trim on the doors is part of the VW cab Comfort Pack.

The last T4s have already rolled off the production line in Germany. Don't expect T5-based motorcaravans just yet, though - we first have to wait for right-hand drive and then for the motorhome industry to do its stuff. Auto-Sleepers hope to launch one short wheelbase T5 conversion at Earls Court in November, but long wheelbase and coachbuilt models will take longer.

In the meantime, some rather special T4s have been used as the basis for a batch of Limited Edition motorcaravans. The panel van conversions - Trooper, Trident and Topaz - are the really interesting ones as they differ most from standard specification. And they come in a range of three metallic colours - Reflex Silver, Nebio Blue or Elegance Green. Looks are further enhanced by alloy wheels; colour-coded bumpers, roofs and mirrors; and front foglamps - all as standard.

Inside, the new models (badged LE) have driver and passenger airbags, cab comfort pack, auxiliary battery and mains charging system, removable carpets, and blown-air heating - taking the total value of options fitted to over £5000. Prices of LE models have been set at more competitive levels, however, to reflect the fact that the base vehicle is an outgoing model. Trident LE, for example, is priced at £29,754 on the road - a saving of £2958 against the same specification on a standard Trident. Ninety Tridents, sixty Troopers, and seventy-five Topaz will be built in LE form.

Auto-Sleepers' T4-based monocoque coachbuilts - Gatcombe and Clubman - will also bow out in Limited Edition versions. These have slightly fewer upgrades and remain in white. Specification includes: 102bhp turbo-diesel engine, cab seat armrests, driver and passenger air bags, moulded waste bin fitted to the caravan door, electric hot plate on the hob, full-width freezer compartment to refrigerator, and vinyl flooring with overlay carpets. Sixty Clubman LEs and forty Gatcombe LEs will be built; prices will represent a £2428 saving against previous models.

June saw the launch of the Vivanti motorhome brand (manufactured by the Auto-Sleepers Group). A network of independent dealers will sell this new range. The Vivanti brand will provide 'high quality, British-built vehicles with Continental styling at value-driven prices'. The range is specifically aimed at the family market and first-time buyers.

At the outset there will be three models: a two-berth high top (V2S - from £28,515), a four-berth coachbuilt (V4S - from £29,448) and a five-berth coachbuilt (V5S - from £35,544). The V2S layout includes a forward-facing seat with inertia reel seatbelt, while the V4S and V5S include a twin dinette that provides two passenger travel seats. The top of the range V5S also offers a fixed rear double bed with large storage area beneath.

All vehicles have been designed with practicality and durability in mind (given Vivanti's experience in the rental market). Standard specification includes fully fitted kitchens, well equipped shower rooms with cassette toilets, reflex foam upholstery, and space and water heating systems. A range of
