The Children's Forest is a place where children can come to learn about the importance and beauty of trees and the natural environment and where they can come and watch 'their' forest grow and flourish as they do.

The Children's Forest is a community forest to which youngsters of all ages can belong.

The original idea for the Children's Forest grew out of the desire of a number of new parents associated with Men of the Trees to give their children a living link with the earth. The idea evolved to the point where families were invited to contribute to the planting of a forest in which all children could share, with the first stage planted at Whiteman Park in 2001.

With each passing year, the Forest grows as more and more children become Children's Forest members, and as each new stage is planted with native seedlings.

Entry to the Children's Forest is free and children, together with their friends and family, are encouraged to explore, enjoy and discover the many wonders of the Forest, including giant marching ants, colourful birds, peeking possums, a life size Wedge-Tailed Eagle's nest made of steel and the Forest's 'guardians', the Boy of the Bush and his sister Fern.
