NYFW: Spa Week and Fashion Indie Team Up for the Ultimate Beauty Break Room

Because NY Fashion Week is such a crazy busy time for crazy stylish fashionistas, Spa Week and Fashion Indie (one of my go-to online fashion sites) were gracious enough to team up and host a pretty sweet event.

Filled with complimentary cocktails, facials, gel manicures, and massages, the Fashion Indie loft that overlooks Madison Square Garden was transformed into the ultimate Beauty Break Room, and it was THE place to rest and rejuvenate on Day 5 of NY Fashion Week. And since it was also Aiden's first day of Pre-Kindergarten (more on that later) and I was totally stressing about it all weekend long, a little mommy pampering was definitely in order. Needless to say, I was beyond happy to be there.

After downing a cocktail (or three! But really, who's counting?) and discussing all things NY Fashion Week, it was time for my pampering sessions. The gel manicures were provided by Spa Martier and the rule was "anything goes." From sparkles to donuts to sail boats, these ladies, with their bad ass skills, left you with nails fit to make a bold fashion statement. Unfortunately, I'm not that bold. Instead, I settled for pink and prissy and delicious -- Chanel nail polish (#539) and a one-finger design.

The facials and massages were provided by Face to Face NYC Spa and it felt like a little piece of heaven. As soon as I sat down for my massage, my new BFF, @EnriqueSkinCare told me, "your shoulders are so tight." Thank you, Motherhood.

(And thanks to Spa Week and Fashion Indie for hosting such a lovely event with a gift bag make-up junkies would kill for.)

Luckily, the sweetness didn't end with this event. This week is also the launch of the SPA WEEK FALL 2011 DIRECTORY on SpaWeek.com! You can begin booking your $50 treatments for Spa Week, which will be October 10th -- 16th. Spa Week's mission is to make the spa lifestyle accessible to ALL, and this Fall, 800 spas and wellness centers in the US
