- Annual Wertman Family Reunion
- 21 & 22 August 2015
- Danville, PA

Please Join Us

The Wertman Family Association (WFA) returns to Danville this summer for its 16th annual reunion. We invite you to come, learn, have fun, and meet cousins from around the country!

Deep Roots in Danville Area

Michael and Simon, two sons of our earliest known Wertman ancestor, George Philip Wertman (GP<sup>1</sup>), migrated from Lynn Twp., present-day Lehigh County, to the Danville area in the early 19th Century. Two of Michael's sons, John and Henry, settled in Hemlock Twp. Nearby were two of Michael's daughters, Catherine (m. Conrad Ebner), and Christina (m. Jacob Fenstermacher). Other grandchildren of GP<sup>1</sup> who moved to the area were Daniel, a son of Jacob, and four of his sisters: Barbara (m. Philip Heimbach); Katherine (m. Michael Heimbach); Elisabeth (m. Henry Krum); and Margaret (m. Michael Sander). Two centuries later, some descendants remain nearby.

New This Year

Several members suggested holding a more compressed reunion, so we have scheduled events on only two days this year. On Friday, researchers will meet, followed by a family dinner and a speaker. On Saturday, attend a catered picnic, the annual meeting and auction, and visit cemeteries.

Tee Shirts

We are offering Wertman Family Reunion tee shirts this year for $8. Please order your shirts by 20 June using the reunion registration form on page 17.

Hotel

The 2015 Reunion Committee is holding a block of rooms Thursday through Sunday nights, 20-23 August, at the Best Western Plus Danville Inn, 79 Old Valley School Road, at the group rate of $101.99 plus tax. To reserve your room, call the hotel at 570-275-5750. Be sure to mention that you are with the Wertman Family Reunion. Please make your reservations as early as possible for your choice of a room with two double beds or one king bed. The rooms will be held until 20 July.

Early Bird Get-Together

Those who arrive by dinnertime on Thursday can enjoy an informal pre-reunion dinner. Meet in the hotel lobby at 6 p.m. to form car pools and select a restaurant. Later, compare research notes!

The New York 8th Heavy Artillery

The 129th NY Infantry was organized at Lockport in August 1862, and was changed to the 8th NY artillery 19 Dec 1862. In 1864 – Grant’s Campaign against Richmond – Fought at Spotsylvania Court House, North Anna River, Cold Harbor and the Petersburg Campaign.

3 June 1864: The Last Charge at Cold Harbor

Eli Cope made the charge, and died. In the span of just twenty minutes the 8th NY lost over two hundred men.

The men showed incredible bravery by attacking a position that many of them knew was impossible to take. As the men sprang from their entrenchments and marched at the double quick, the Confederates opened fire, sending volley after volley into the Union ranks. The results were appalling and the men began to stagger back from the sheets of southern musketry. The 8th got within fifty feet of the enemy before Colonel Porter was struck four times and fell dead between the lines. With their Colonel dead on the field, the 8th NY fell back to the protection of their earthworks and as they swept back to safety many of the men tripped over their comrades who lay dead or dying.

General Grant said of the battle in his memoirs, “I have always regretted that the last assault at Cold Harbor was ever made.... No advantage whatever was gained to compensate for the heavy loss we sustained.”

Speaker: Brian Reynolds

Brian is a land surveyor in Hastings, a member and past president of the Barry County Historical Society. He is very interested in historical research.

Wertmans arrived in Michigan after the Civil War. Land records show them in Cedar Creek. Modern day roads follow the Indian trails. Barry County was not on the major trails and has been bypassed by Interstates and major development.

Thomas Jefferson designed the rectangular survey system for land division. The Federal Government survey crew worked in uncharted territory in the newly opened Midwest, through swamps and forests. Each section measured one mile on a side.

Two or three ax men cut trees on the line. A compass man kept the surveyors on line, adjusting for magnetic north and true north. Chains were used to measure in half-mile increments (40 chains) to set corners. A chain was 66 feet. Easier to work with, a half-chain, 33 feet, was laid and secured with a chain pin. This continued until all the pins on a ring were used. The man in the rear collected the pins. The chain was held horizontally level over hilly ground.

A corner is permanently wherever the government surveyor put a monument, whether or not someone moved the monument. A sharpened tree trunk was pounded halfway into the ground. Two witness trees had large notches pointing to the monument.

Next, the county surveyor came to allocate parts of 40 acres — a quarter of a section — or more for buyers. His job was to put a permanent marker in place of the wood, using the witness trees. He found two more witness trees and put in a more permanent marker, a pointed, marked stone, along with something man-made, such as a horseshoe, broken glass, crockery or junk iron, so future surveyors would know the stone was the correct marker.

In the late 19th Century, corner markers were replaced with tiles. Later markers were iron stakes or pipes. Now, markers are solid iron tubes with a cap. Surveyors can use metal detectors to find buried markers. Using GPS technology, surveyors will not need markers in the future.

Respectfully submitted,

Minerva Arner

Recording Secretary

Our Friday after-dinner speaker, Brian Reynolds, a surveyor and historian, invited family members to stop by his office in downtown Hastings on Saturday morning. He showed us old maps and explained surveying equipment

Isaac Reichelderfer Letter

from Brenda Merz

How did family members communicate when they had moved to new locations far away? The following is a letter, originally written in German, from Isaac Reichelderfer in Philadelphia to his uncles living in Pickaway County, Ohio. This family was related to Simon and Martin Wertman by marriage. The source of the letter is the Birds of a Feather site maintained by Wayne Thomas of Lancaster, OH, about 20 miles from Circleville. This researcher is very good and was trying to put together Salt Creek Township genealogy. My G-G-Grandfather was living a few feet from this township line after he moved to Ohio. The individuals listed in this letter were from the Corner or Brick Church.

"Philadelphia, Feb 6, 1859

"Dear Uncles: Jacob Reichelderfer, Henry Reichelderfer, John Reichelderfer, William Stump, Samuel Fetherolf, and to all the rest; too many all to name.

"I am in good health and hope that these few lines will find you also, all in good health and likewise all the other friends that live in your part of the world. Times here are still hard, however, not quite so hard as they were a year ago, and I think by next summer will be much better. By all signs as it now appears there will be a good deal of building here next summer. For my part I did not have much to complain of on that account, for I always had work through all the hard times. Though the wages were low, it was better than doing nothing, for I have made a living. But I cannot write concerning my brothers and sisters for I have not heard from them for a long time, and have seen none of them since I came back from Ohio.

"I am not at home since I came back from you. On that account I do not know much from Albany. Jacob Reichelderfer, why did you not come to Philadelphia when you were in Pennsylvania a year ago? I would like to have spent a few days with you and to have shown you the elephant, and I think you would not have regretted it.

"I would have written long ago but I have been all the time expecting a letter from cousin William Fetherolf. He promised me when he was here last spring that he would write to me as soon as he got home but I have not heard from him since I left. We have not had much winter so far; very little snow but a great deal of rain.

"I do not know much further to write for this time; so much from me, your friend and well wisher, Isaac Reichelderfer

"Write soon and don't forget it. (Excuse my bad writing for my ink and pens are bad.) Direct your letter South East Corner Third and Buttonwood Streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania."

Wortsman on Warrant

From Hal and Brenda Merz

We came across a Warrant of George Boon dated 15 December 1748 for 500 acres near the lands of one Curdeman and one Wortsman on Andelanny Creek in Bucks County.

The survey below, dated 20 November 1749, is for 332 1/2 acres on Pine Creek in Philadelphia County for George Boone.

So, who is this Wortsman?

Tightening the Screws: Embracing our Ancestry, Part II

by Hal and Brenda Merz

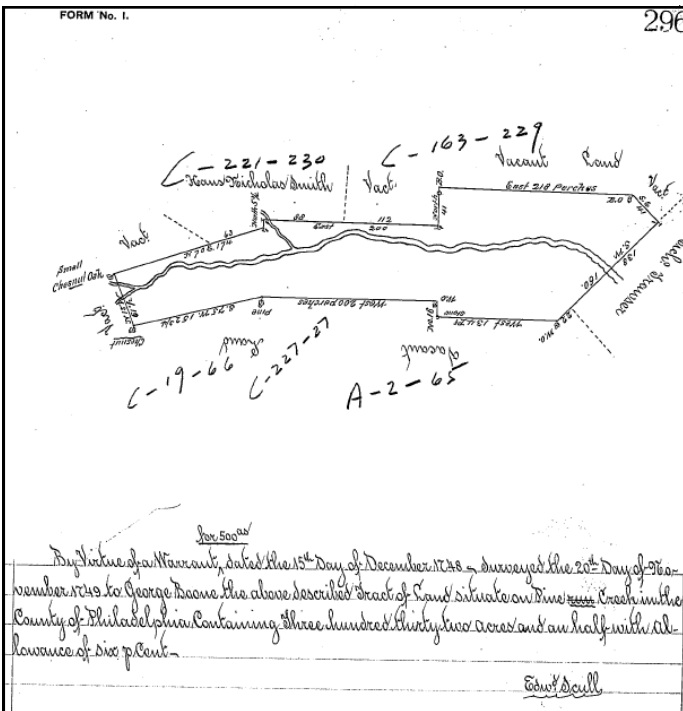

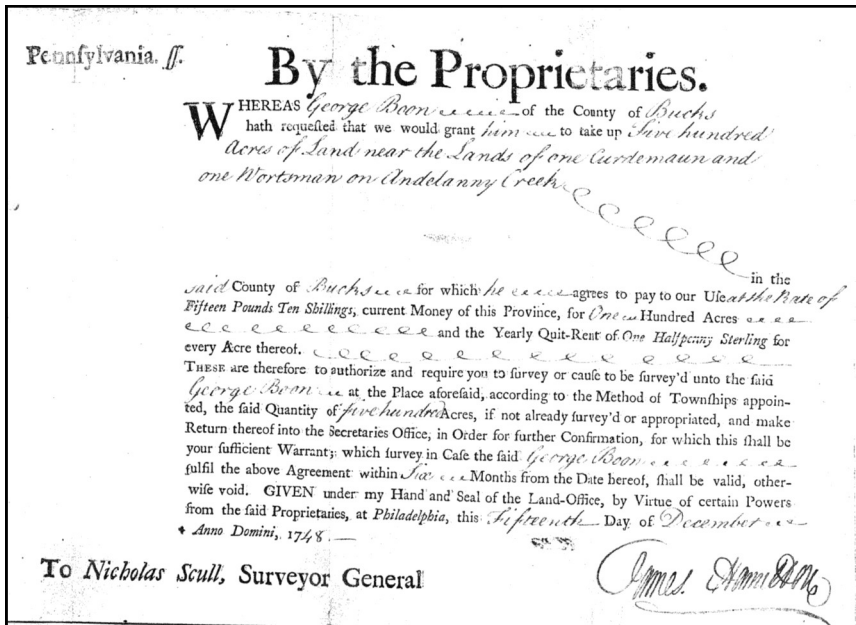

In Part I of this article (January 2015 Wertman Lines), we outlined conditions the Wertman family faced before and after the Revolutionary War. Now we explore the “tightening screws” of laws and actions that forced people to consider the consequences of continuing to hold Loyalist convictions. Much of the information comes from a book by Dr. Anne Ousterhout, a Professor at Michigan State, “A State Divided,” detailing the circumstances and treatment of Pennsylvania Loyalists.

There was more and more pressure for Pennsylvanians to actively support the American Revolution by joining and participating in the militia organizations in each county. It was recognized that some people, (Quaker and Mennonite pacifists) might have legitimate reasons to not participate in the Revolution. A series of acts of the Pennsylvania Assembly made it increasingly tough for those not joining the militia.

It was suggested that the pacifists and others who did not want to join the militia should voluntarily support the militias by contributing supplies and money. In November 1775, the Assembly passed regulations requiring all males age 16 to 50 to join the militia, or face a fine starting at 2 Pounds, 10 shillings and increasing to 100 pounds by 1779 (the fine collections didn't actually start until 1777).

Early on, there were very few cases of people being charged with crimes in connection with their political views of Loyalism. Less than 50 people suffered “public condemnation” before 1777. Most were just charged for something like disturbing the peace. Privately, many pacifists and Loyalists were mistreated by their neighbors from insults through property vandalism. Meanwhile, the Quakers pushed back by strengthening their opposition to military service, disciplining more than 140 members in 1775 for joining the militias.

After the Declaration of Independence, the Pennsylvania Assembly created additional penalties for non-participation in military service. In September 1776, every “non-associator” (person not joining the militia) between 16 and 50 years of age was to be fined 20 shillings for every month that they avoided the militia practices. Every non-associator over 21 had to pay a property tax surcharge of 20% on normal taxes. An additional ordinance authorized the militia colonels to collect firearms from the non-associators. As the British won a number of battles and were approaching Philadelphia, tensions rose and in June 1777, the Assembly passed the “Test Act,” with the following provisions:

All white males over 18 were required by July 1 to take an oath or affirmation to renounce their allegiance to the King of England.

Justices of the Peace were required to keep lists and provide each juror (person taking the oath or affirming) with a certificate to prove that he had done so.

Anyone not having a certificate could not hold office, serve on a jury, buy or sell land, or own a firearm. He could not travel without having the certificate on his person.

The Test Act was widely opposed even by Pennsylvanians supporting independence. For example, two townships in Northampton County were left without magistrates. Both of the appointees refused to sign. Dr. Ousterhout summarized the situation at that time: “Any Pennsylvanian with misgivings about independence who was also disturbed about the lack of orderly government might be strongly tempted to defect to the British Army as it drew near, especially if he had suffered from arbitrary measures or vigilantism. It is not surprising that many would join the British during their occupation of Philadelphia.”

George Phillip Wertman II was one of an estimated 6,000 Pennsylvanians who went to the British during their time in Philadelphia from September 1777 to June 1778. The Pennsylvania Assembly, which had relocated from Philadelphia to Lancaster, passed a property confiscation law applying to people who had joined the British cause. In February 1778, William Thomas was one of the first people in the state to have his property confiscated and sold. Recall that William Thomas was one of the leaders of the Loyalist movement in Lynn Township, and later became a leader of a Loyalist regiment. The Assembly added an act that required certain people to appear for trial. If they did not report within 40 days, they would be declared guilty without a trial and their property was to be confiscated. From May 1778 to April 1781, there were 11 different proclamations listing a total of 491 people.

The “Test Act,” which had required Pennsylvanians to make a formal declaration of loyalty by signing documents, was amended and strengthened in March 1778. Anyone who had not signed previously was given until 1 June 1778 to do so. The lists show that some of the Wertmans waited until nearly the last permissible day to make their declaration – Simon Wertman on one of the last days in May.

The consequences of not signing the amended Test Act increased. The new fines included one of 500 Pounds levied on people not signing the Act who were connected with schools, law, medicine or trade. Any two Justices of the Peace could summon any white male over 18 to take the oath. If he refused, he could be jailed for three months or fined 10 Pounds. And if he had not signed at the next quarter session court for his county, he would be given 30 days to take the oath, or be ordered to leave the state and forfeit his property. The price of maintaining a Loyalist or pacifist view became very, very high. In May 1778, the Northampton County court used the new law to summon all white males from Upper Saucon Township, an area inhabited largely by Mennonites. When they refused to sign, justices ordered 12 Mennonites to leave the state and forfeited their property. Sheriffs confiscated their property and sold it at auction in July 1778. A later amendment softened these requirements, but did not restore the property to those who had suffered confiscation. Brenda and I saw a letter where two ladies whose property was confiscated wrote to the authorities asking that their bed sheets be returned!

The treatment of wives and families of Loyalists was of concern. Wives or other family members were given passes and crossed Patriot lines to visit their husbands in Philadelphia or New York. Others sent packages of clothing and supplies to their husbands. The volume of visitor pass requests and the packages grew, and was a security issue for the Patriot forces. They suspected that espionage was being conducted through communication between Loyalists and their family members. As a consequence, the state of Pennsylvania in June 1780 passed a law requiring the wives and children of attainted Loyalists to leave the state within 10 days! We do not know how many wives actually left Pennsylvania as a consequence of the 1780 law. Some might have been tempted to flee to British-occupied zones such as Philadelphia (and later, New York City). But those places were not safe or convenient places to bring a family. Housing was scarce due to the large number of British troops temporarily staying there, and prices were driven up due to supply shortages. Many of the Loyalists were essentially military volunteers who did not receive wages from the British, and had to depend on foraging and whatever meager savings they had brought with them. So they did not have the means to support a family.

The reality was, many of the Loyalists had to say “goodbye” to their wives and families. There is evidence of this in a list drawn up in 1784 in Digby, Nova Scotia. The list shows the names of George Phillip Wertman II and about 150 other Loyalists. There is a column on the list to show the number of family members. Very few of the men listed any family members. We know that George Phillip Wertman left behind a daughter, Margaret, and may have left others as well.

Perhaps GPII wasn't just a hot-head who left his family. It is possible the entire family stood in disbelief as they had to relive old ways of war and agony from the mother country. Embrace your ancestry with dignity!

About The Wertman Family Association (WFA)

Since 2000, the rejuvenated Wertman Family Association has held annual reunions in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, New York, and Virginia. Those who attend learn more about relatives who lived before them, and form relationships with cousins from around the country. A unique feature of these events is a full-day session for researchers to share their discoveries. An earlier family association held reunion picnics in Pennsylvania and Michigan for a large group of relatives in the 1920s and 1930s.

Via our website, wertman.info, strangers can discover long-lost family connections. The Wertman web pages disseminate accurate information about the family's heritage. In August 2007, the association dedicated a monument in the old graveyard at Ebenezer Union Church in New Tripoli, Lehigh County, PA. The black granite stone is in memory of the Wertman family that came to Lynn Township by 1749, including the “founding father,” George Philip Wertman (a deacon at Ebenezer Church), and his five known sons, George Philip, Jacob, Johan Martin, Johan Michael, and Simon.

We invite you to join us!
