

Law and Institutions of Modern China

Critical Concepts in Law

Edited and with a new introduction by Sanzhu Zhu, School of Oriental and African Studies, UK

In the past three decades, the Chinese legal system has undergone a substantial transformation, reflecting the economic, social, culture, administrative, and political changes taking place in China. Compared with the situation in the early 1950s when the newly established People's Republic of China started to construct a socialist legal system and with the situation in the early 1980s when post-Cultural Revolution (1966–76) legal reform had just started, the current Chinese legal system has become a relatively comprehensive system, comparable to a certain degree with the jurisdictions in Western developed countries.

This new Major Work collection from Routledge brings together the most representative pieces for a comprehensive set covering every aspect of current Chinese law, providing readers with a one-stop reference resource on China's legal, judicial, and institutional changes in the past decades, as well as current law and institutions in China.

Critical Legal Theory

Edited and with a new introduction by Costas Douzinas and Colin Perrin

Critical Legal Theory is now an established—if heterogeneous and controversial—field of study, represented by numerous international journals, regional organizations, and global conferences. As the field continues to flourish as never before, this new title in Routledge's Major Works series, Critical Concepts in Law meets the need for an authoritative reference work to make sense of a rapidly growing and ever more complex corpus of literature. Indeed, it is a landmark collection of Critical Legal Theory's principal sources, orientations, movements, and themes.
