Learn first hand from practicing lobbyists, and the agencies that are promulgating the filing procedures and regulations how this law will be implemented and how you and your clients can best comply with it.

- What activities are regulated?
- Who is required to register?
- Who is exempted from registration (and reporting)?
- Having registered, what are my obligations?
- What are the penalties for violation of the Act?

"Representing Witnesses in Federal Grand Jury Proceedings" CLE #313

Co-sponsored by the PBA Federal Practice Committee and the Bar Association of the Third Federal Circuit

You represent a corporate client. It's Friday afternoon and your client's president calls to say that she received a subpoena to appear before a federal grand jury on Monday and to bring with her any documents the corporation has in its possession in any form, including electronic, relating to your client's dispute with its corporate opponent.

"Is this something we have to be concerned about?" asks the client. How do you respond? What do you do?

Our panel will help you analyze any potential exposure for your client. Understand the distinctions if your client is a mere "witness" as opposed to a "subject" or a "target" in the grand jury's investigation. Be prepared to explain any privileges that come into play in responding to the subpoena. Get insights on whether there may be a basis to quash or otherwise challenge the subpoena ... and if there is, do you want to try? If you do and lose, can you appeal?

Hear a lively discussion by a panel who have been intimately involved in these and other questions related to representing witnesses before federal grand juries.

“Judicial Independence and Retention Elections” CLE #316

Co-sponsored by the Judicial Administration Committee

In 2007, eight members of Pennsylvania’s three appellate courts – 25 percent of the complement of commissioned judges and justices on those courts – will be on the ballot in the November election as they stand for retention. So will a large number of the judges of the courts of common pleas in judicial districts throughout the state.

A panel of lawyers, jurists and communications professionals will offer advice for lawyers and judicial candidates. Learn what rules govern the role of lawyers in the retention process. You will understand the guidance offered by our Rules of Professional Conduct. Do lawyers have any special obligations in these elections? Our panel will discuss how much, if at all, judges who are up for a retention “yes/no” vote may campaign. You will gain insights on the impact of the United States Supreme Court’s 2002 decision in Republican Party of Minnesota v. White on retention elections. Be certain that you understand the limits on fundraising, if any, imposed on these candidates. You will hear a fascinating discussion on how a sitting jurist can maintain her or his judicial independence and impartiality while campaigning for retention.

WIP “Proven Strategies for Successfully Managing the Demands of a Law Practice and Personal Life” CLE #314

Data from both inside and outside Pennsylvania reflect that, while women are hired and compensated at levels commensurate with men at the inception of their legal careers, they tend to leave the profession or move to lower-paying positions after about 4-5 years in practice – at about the time they begin a family. The data also indicate that a powerful driver of this phenomenon is a perceived inability to balance the competing demands of firm and family.

Presented by prominent women lawyers, this seminar shares practical tips on how to achieve success in the practice of law while maintaining a satisfying life outside the firm. State and federal employment laws that govern such issues as part-time work, flexible work hours, working from home and other “family-friendly” employment practices will be addressed.

WIP “Women Making Connections: Communication Survival Skills for Today’s Woman Lawyer” CLE #318

Take a good look around you: your boss, your mentor, the CEO of your organization. What is the one skill they all have in common?

An ability to communicate effectively is a skill that all true leaders possess; in fact, it is essential to professional success. Strong leaders build upon their natural strengths and comfort zones to develop the skills and strategies that enable them to communicate effectively and craft strong, effective relationships. These interrelated skills are the building blocks for success.

In this interactive workshop, Karen B. Kahn of KM Advisors teaches today’s busy, strong, independent woman how to enhance her interpersonal communication skills and expand the nature of her relationships in order to achieve greater success on the job and at home. Karen offers concepts, strategies and practical tools for communicating more effectively in the courtroom and boardroom, with clients and peers, and more personally, with family and friends. This informational, practical and interactive seminar will include these topics:

- The strategy for developing long-lasting relationships
- An easily implemented model for relationship development
- Interpersonal communication tools: when, who and how
