The Maritime Museum of the Atlantic does not insure the Owner's bear(s) during transit, storage, or display. Reasonable care will be given to the bear(s) while in custody. The sole responsibility of the Maritime Museum of the Atlantic is that of being voluntary exhibitor of the described bear(s). The Maritime Museum of the Atlantic undertakes to safeguard the described bear(s) to the same and no greater extent as its own collection and is liable to the Owner only to the extent that the Maritime Museum is culpably negligent in the receiving, storage, exhibit, and repacking(if any) of the described bear(s). The Maritime Museum will not clean, alter or try to repair the bear(s); however the Museum may pose the bear(s) if the appendages are moveable and if the pose can be reversed after the Exhibit.

It is recommended by the Maritime Museum of the Atlantic, if the Owner requires any form of insurance coverage, that the Owner make specific arrangements for same at his/her cost.

It is agreed that photographs may be taken by the Maritime Museum for catalogue, education, or publicity purposes.
