Helping the Helper Secondary Traumatic Stress in Human Services

- Participants will learn to define primary and secondary trauma and how secondary traumatic stress affects human service professionals.
- Participants will be able to identify specific risk factors that increase the intensity of impact of secondary trauma on staff.
- Participants will learn to identify individual and team/unit strategies for responding constructively to secondary trauma.
- Participants will get an opportunity to assess their own levels of traumatic stress and discuss the impact of work on their personal/professional lives.
- Participants will learn to identify what a “recovery environment” in their agency is, and how to make steps toward facilitating its development.
