ACADEMY2009

ACADEMY2009

AWCI'S MOST POWERFUL LEARNING OPPORTUNITY

Academy is sponsored by The Association of the Wall and Ceiling Industry, the nation's premier association representing the full range of wall and ceiling professionals.

Each year AWCI surveys its members and industry professionals for directions in the industry and educational opportunities that would best address critical issues and industry trends. With this information, AWCI's Education Committee develops a two day educational program for middle and lower levels of management in the construction industry.

Academy 2009 will feature two tracks, one managerial and one technical.

AWCI's Academy is designed for estimators, safety specialist, senior management, field superintendents, project managers, architects, specifiers and emerging construction executives. Do not miss this opportunity to enhance your skills for today's jobs in the construction industry. Register today for Academy 2009.

Track 1: Managerial

You and the Bank

Speaker: Henry Goudreau

The non-construction side of running your business depends greatly on your cash flow and banking relationship. When developing a relationship with a bank, your banker wants to understand your business well enough so that he feels comfortable enough to extend you a line of credit. But before that can happen, your banker needs to know that you know enough about your business. Part of proving your knowledge is explaining how you approach risk management and insurance, and how risk management and insurance plays into your business model. This track will cover the essentials of your banking relationship, how to secure a line of credit under reasonable terms and the essentials of risk management and business insurance.

About the Speaker

Thirty years ago, when Henry Goudreau decided it was time to stop working for others and build his own business, his greatest asset was the realization that there was a lot he needed to learn. He sought out the best teachers, consultants, seminars and books—especially in areas where many entrepreneurs fall short: business development, marketing, advertising, employee training and customer satisfaction. Goudreau's background is in the construction business; his father was a contractor. His technical know-how is construction, but now his passion is passing on what he learned and helping others grow their dreams. His gift for teaching people the secrets to business profitability continues to make audiences sit up and listen. Goudreau will get your people on-track, laser focused, and fighting for their dreams once more. Goudreau is currently the CEO and founder of HG & Associates, Inc. in Sarasota, Fla.

Track 2: TechnicalAcoustical Ceilings-Doing It Right*Speaker: Dennis Alvarez, P.E.

This one-day seminar covers the proper installation of suspended ceilings, types of surfaces, moldings and accessories, codes and standards, engineering and design considerations, material handling, specialty tools, estimating and project management/quality control.

About the Speaker

Dennis Alvarez has more than 26 years of product development experience in suspended ceilings grid and specialty ceilings with USG Corporation and its predecessor, Donn Corporation, and more than 15 years managing this responsibility. He has been a task group chairperson of ASTM E33.04A for the last 25 years. This task group is responsible for maintaining standards such as those for the application of ceiling suspension systems for acoustical tile and lay-in panels in areas requiring moderate seismic restraint, and standard practices for the installation of metal ceiling suspension systems for acoustical tile and lay-in panels. Alvarez is also a member of the Practice Committee for the Consortium of Universities for Research in Earthquake Engineering NEESR study of non-structural component performance during earthquakes. He is also a contributor to the development of the National Earthquake Hazard Reduction Program and ATC-58.

Managing & Scheduling Work Crews and People ManagementSpeaker: Charles Vander Kooi*Managing & Scheduling Work Crews

In this informative seminar, industry expert Charles Vander Kooi covers several key points related to managing and scheduling your crews. Topics include bidding by dollars versus by production hours, controlling labor, the number of men you should put on a job and how long you should be on a job.

People Management

It takes a certain type of person to be able to motivate and effectively manage a construction crew. In this program Charles Vander Kooi draws from more than 40 years of experience in the construction industry as an upper management employee, consultant and professional lecturer to share his expertise on the broad subject of people management. In it he talks about the good employee who has gone bad, the four different personalities needed in a business, communication with contractors, and many other topics that are vital to effectively running a company.

About the Speaker

Charles Vander Kooi has been involved in the construction industry for more than four decades, 15 years as an estimator and upper-management employee of companies, and 26 as a leading consultant and speaker. As a private consultant, he has helped more than 1,200 companies in their estimating/bidding systems, and has lectured to more than 200,000 people nationally and internationally. He consults with an average of 50 clients annually, assisting in and improving their performance. He has authored several books on the industry, created and publishes HardScope Magazine. His seminars are available on audio as well as video.
