7. Description

Inventory No. ^M14-12

Condition

excellent deteriorated
 good ruins
 fair altered

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Hawkins Farm is located on the south side of Hawkins Creamery Road, just west of Laytonsville Road (Rt 108). The 5.27-acre property (P530) includes the dwelling house, bank barn, and corn crib. The northern portion of the driveway is located on Outlots B and C. Immediately south of parcel P530 lies a 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ acre-parcel (P606) that contains a concrete block structure, a trailer, and a non-historic dwelling house. East of the farmstead, in former cropland, lies Outlot A and five flag lots for residences. About 800 feet due south of the farmstead is an airstrip, known as Davis Airport.

Landscape

Mature trees surrounding the dwelling house include fir, cedar, oak and magnolia. The driveway approaches the house from the northeast and extends west of the house and continues south past the bank barn to conclude in a circle at the dairy barn. A fishpond is located on the front lawn near the house. A gazebo, east of the bank barn, shelters a water pump. The creamery building was located northwest of the house near the bend in the driveway. No above ground evidence remains of the structure.

Dwelling House

The frame, two and a half-story, Queen Anne-style house has a complex form. The main block is a cubical form with a hip roof. A three-story tower punctuates the northeast corner. Front gable wings and/or pavilions extend from west, south, and east façades. The tower and dormers have wood shingle siding in alternating patterns. The bracketed, denticulated cornice ends in returns on the east gable, and is pedimented on west and south gables. Dormers have deep cornice returns. The foundation is stone.

A substantial porch wraps around the north and west façades. The porch cornice, like the dormers, echoes the main roof cornice with brackets and dentils. Turned porch posts are accented by drop pendants above.

Windows are 2/2 sash. Dormers have segmental arched windows with 2/2 sash. The main entrance is on the north façade. The beveled glass door is surmounted by a rectilinear transom and sidelights. A secondary door on the west façade has leaded glass.

The dwelling has had little alteration. Vinyl siding covers the original tongue and groove siding and louvered shutters have been removed. The patterned slate roof has been replaced by patterned fiberglass shingle. A rear porch has been enclosed yet retains its character with bands of windows on each side. Alterations on the rear of the east façade (not visible from public way or from driveway) include a bay window with plate glass windows, sliding glass door, and a second level balcony.

Bank Barn

The bank barn, built in 1896, has mortised, tenoned and pegged framing members and a stone foundation. Multi-pane windows have been added to each façade. Walls are covered with metal siding.

Corn Crib

This structure is believed to date from 1917. The building was adapted for the antiques business office. Grooved panel siding covers the west (main) façade. A central door is flanked by 1/1 sash windows and surmounted by an oversize fanlight window.

Domestic Outbuilding

A one-story frame outbuilding with drop siding stands behind the dwelling house. The front gable roof has wood shingles and shallow cornice returns. Horizontal windows flank the central door. An oversize fanlight window lights the front gable. The building may have originally been a smokehouse.

Parcel P606

A concrete block structure with a low slope roof appears to have been a milk house originally. It now houses a restoration shop. Entrance is through wide doors on the east façade. The building has a brick watertable. A wide chimney is on the south gable façade. Nearby stand concrete silos with partial walls of terra cotta block. A one and a half story dwelling nearby dates from 1996. An early residence was located on this parcel and was razed for construction of the new house.¹

The Hawkins Farm is significant for representing the late 19th to early 20th century history of agriculture in the area. In addition, the residence is an outstanding example of high style architecture noteworthy in this part of the county.

Thomas and Susan Clagett Hawkins, established a farm in the vicinity in 1860. The Hawkins Creamery Farm was carved out of their property. By 1879, William Hawkins was living at this location. An early house was located on parcel P606, at the back of the present farmstead.²

William Hawkins was a member of Mt. Tabor Church, where he was an organist. The bank barn dates from 1898 and the dwelling house from c1905-7. In 1909, William Hawkins married Nellie May Linthicum. They had at least one child, Mary Edith, born 1914.³

The house is an elaborate design for this part of the county. The builder was a Mr. Fish, whose name is said to be inscribed on a rafter.⁴

The Hawkins established a creamery at their farm, which became a successful operation. The site of the creamery structure is believed to have been northwest of house, at the bend in the driveway. Hawkins Creamery Road, extending from Woodfield Road (Route 124) to Laytonsville Road (Rt 108), was platted in 1884. The eastern portion of the road, from Hawkins Farm to Laytonsville Road, had already been established and was known locally as Hawkins Outlet.⁵

Earl and Bette Marshall bought this property in 1955, ten years after their marriage. Earl was a transportation specialist for the Department of Defense at the Pentagon. Upon his retirement in 1965, ⁵Deed EBP 34:137. After the road was platted, it was known as Duvall Road, providing access to extensive Duvall land along Great Seneca Creek. Later the name was changed to Hawkins Creamery. See MHT form 11/23 Duvall Farm.

Earl and Bette opened an antiques business at the Hawkins Farm, which grew to become Yesteryear Farms antique village. The business became highly successful and operated until 1999. A Captain in the U.S. Army, Transportation Corps, Earl had served in World War II in the Pacific. The couple had 15 children, some of whom settled in Montgomery County.⁶

The farm was subdivided in 1996. Five house lots established east of the historic house were intended for Marshall children.⁷
