Equity = Excellence

California Community Colleges at the Vanguard of Change

Featured Speaker: Professor James Banks, Director of the Center for Multicultural Education, University of Washington

Thursday, May I and Friday, May 2, 2008

A Statewide Conference for Community College Educators

DeAnza College Sponsored by De Anza Community College

Our Invitation to You

The complex nature of the current educational imperatives within the California Community College system demands that we create teaching and learning environments that are dynamic and responsive to the diversity of our student population. Educational equity is the outcome of achieving this goal. The community college system must shift its thinking to embrace the attributional view of the students we serve. This conference aims to provide a venue in which we as educators, and our community partners, can share effective pedagogies and practices, explore and examine policies that impact the lives of our students and their families, and create networks for present and future development and change within higher education.

Conference Goals

- To share effective educational pedagogies, practices, and partnerships for serving California Community Colleges' diverse student populations.
- To explore policy and organizational initiatives statewide which foster the institutionalization of student equity throughout the California Community College system.
- To provide information, strategies, and share institutional practices related to the hiring and retention of diverse faculty, staff and administrators
