CRYOGENIC TRANSPORT TRAILERS

TUESDAY,
OCTOBER 16, 2012

James Russell Engineering Works, Inc.
9 Dewar Street, Boston, MA 02125
<http://www.russelleng.com/>

James Russell Engineering Works, was founded in Boston in 1874 as metal fabricators, on the property that now is Gillette. The company is owned and managed by Elizabeth Russell, the fifth generation of the Russell family. In 1917 they moved to their "new building" in the heart of Dorchester. It was in the late 1950s James Russell started to manufacture cryogenic trailers, by the mid 1960s these trailers became their sole product. Today James Russell Engineering employs 35 people and builds 35-40 trailers a year, distributed throughout North, Central and South America.

CRYOGENICS:

The study of the production of very low temperatures, below -238 degrees Fahrenheit

Most of us deal with temperatures in a 100 degree range and can not relate to these extremely cold temperatures

Dave Hahn is the sales and engineering manager for Russell Engineering. We hope to have Mike Janak and John Sorota from TransGas to discuss how they ship Liquid Natural Gas (LNG) at -260 degrees Fahrenheit. We see these trailers on the highway everyday, learn how these gasses are transported safely in a liquefied state.
