DESCRIPTION

William Wyatt Bibb was born in Virginia in 1780. After graduating from William and Mary College, he went on to study medicine at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1801 he received his M.D. degree and moved to Georgia. In Georgia Bibb became interested in politics. He was both a Georgia congressman and senator. Also, he was a U.S. Senator between 1813 and 1816. Eventually, Bibb became the Governor of Alabama, the office in which he died in 1820. His successor was his son Thomas Bibb.

William Wyatt Bibb ALS, Ms 2705 (M), includes one letter of 25 June 1816 written by Bibb and addressed, possibly, to Senator Charles Tait of Georgia. In the letter Bibb discusses the public outrage stemming from his congressional proposal to fix the salaries of senators and congressmen, an idea regarded unethical and illegal by the nation. In 1816, as a result of the controversy, Bibb was forced to resign his Senate seat. Also included in William Wyatt Bibb ALS are Bibb's ideas concerning the replacement of Col. Benjamin Hawkins, Indian Agent for the southeastern United States, who had died in office.

Bickett, Francis
Francis Bickett letters, 1861-1865
14 items

Francis Bickett was a 1st Lieutenant in the 47th Ohio Infantry. The collection consists of fourteen letters he wrote to his wife Bell (Isabella) as he moved through Ohio, Virginia, Mississippi (Vicksburg), Alabama, Tennessee, and Georgia. His regiment marched from Atlanta to Savannah where he describes leading the charge on Fort McAllister.

Bickett's letters tell of his love and concern for his wife and daughter, Bina; his apology for not having money to send them; his reenlistment; and his wish for the war to be over so he can return home.

Bird, Edgeworth, 1825-1867.

Edgeworth Bird family papers, 1806, 1835-1949 (bulk 1861-1902).

2.5 linear ft.

Arranged by record type.

Edgeworth Bird (1825-1867), planter of Hancock County (Ga.) and soldier in the 3rd Georgia Infantry Regiment, married Sallie C. Baxter (1828-1910). Their children included Wilson Edgeworth and Saida B. who married Victor Smith, their son was Victor Edgeworth Smith.

The collection consists of papers of Edgeworth Bird and the Bird family from 1806, 1835-1949. The papers include correspondence, clippings, photographs (ca. 1848-1900) of the Bird family, a commonplace book (1843-1848) of Sallie C. Baxter containing extracts from her readings, an autograph book, an 1806 diary (author unknown) describing activities in Hancock and surrounding counties in Georgia, and genealogies of the Baxter, Bird, and allied families. Early correspondence (1839-1851) is between members of the Baxter family including letters between Thomas W. and Mary Baxter discussing his health, taxes, and land values; and letters from Leroy M. Wiley to Thomas detailing Wiley's trip to England in 1839.

The bulk of the collection consists of correspondence between Bird and Smith family members including Edgeworth Bird, Sallie Bird, Saida Bird (Smith), Wilson Edgeworth Bird, and Victor Edgeworth Smith. Of particular interest are letters (1856) from Edgeworth to Sallie describing his visit to New York City, Fire Island (N.Y.), and U.S. politics and letters written between family members during the Civil War. The Civil War letters from Edgeworth discuss the battles of Gettysburg (Pa.), Richmond (Va.), 2nd Bull Run (Va.), Chickamauga, the Atlanta Campaign, and Sherman's March through Georgia. The letters also detail the management of Granite Farm (Hancock County, Ga.), slavery, and Saida's studies.

Scope and Content Note

The Claude A. Black Collection contains the papers, research notes, correspondence, printed material, etc. of Col. Black (U.S. Army, Ret.). An avid horticulturalist, Black began the effort to save the Leconte family gardens at Woodmanston plantation. The first part of this collection, the Leconte-Woodmanston Project Section, consists of 13 1/2 boxes of materials relating to the gardens, the Lecontes, garden club activities and Black's efforts at conservation.

The Botanical and Floral Garden at Woodmanston were designed by Louis Leconte, father of the famous Leconte brothers, pioneers in the sciences in the United States. In July 1971, Clermont Lee, a coastal naturalist, introduced Black to the gardens and their plight. The family's home at Woodmanston had been destroyed many years earlier, but Black hoped that much of the vegetation could be rescued from the growth that had covered it. Black found some remains of the garden's species in November, including a rare camellia japonica. He immediately moved to stop clear-cutting of the Woodmanston lands by its lessor the Brunswick Pulp and Paper Co. A provisional committee formed in January 1972 under the sponsorship of the Liberty County Historical Society. The gardens were placed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1973 and in 1977 the paper company signed their lease over to the Nature Conservancy.

The ecological and historical value of Leconte-Woodmanston caused Black to devote over a decade of work to its benefit. The correspondence ends in 1985, with plans for Woodmanston very sketchy and Black's health failing.

Black's love of natural history is also apparent in the General History Section of the collection. These last three boxes consist of materials on a wide range of topics, many centering on east Tennessee where the Black's lived for a few years.

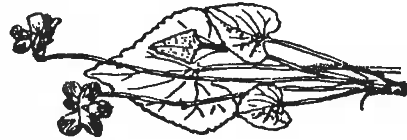

LeConte-Woodmanston a project of

The Garden Club of Georgia

On June 6, 1977, in a ceremony on the site of the Louis LeConte Botanical and Floral Garden, Woodmanston Plantation lands, Liberty County, Georgia, title to a 63.8 acre tract was legally transferred to the Garden Club of Georgia, Inc. The Brunswick Pulp and Paper Company donated its lease and option equities in the tract while the heirs to the Estate of the late Mr. C.B. Jones conveyed ownership of the land. The Nature Conservancy acted as intermediary in the transaction.

The LeConte-Woodmanston Project is a comprehensive undertaking, with plans to be accomplished in phases, according to a Master Plan, to preserve and partially restore the 63.8 acre central area of the original 3,354 acre LeConte-Woodmanston Plantation. The goal is to construct a series of horticultural and formal gardens as a Living Memorial to reflect great significance and interest inherent in the LeConte family and its ancestral home in Low Country Georgia. This project, when completed shall be an important tourist attraction, aesthetically and educationally.

VIOLA AFFINIS,
LECONTE VIOLET

Woodmanston Plantation was founded in 1760 by the brothers William and John Eatton LeConte, descendants of a French Huguenot emigre.

In 1810, Louis LeConte, the son of John Eatton LeConte, came into possession of LeConte-Woodmanston and married Ann Quarterman of Liberty County, Georgia. His life, from 1810 until his death in 1838, was devoted to his family and it's Woodmanston home. Here Louis and Ann LeConte founded the Georgia branch of the LeConte family which contributed to the State's most distinguished citizens. In the words of the late Dr. James Stokes, "The LeConte family probably is Georgia's most distinguished family of scientists..." (The American Camellia Yearbook, 1949.) Two of Louis and Ann LeConte's sons, John and Joseph, were among the principal founders of the University of California at Berkeley. John became its first President and Joseph a famous Professor of Geology there.

Under Louis LeConte's careful custodianship, Woodmanston prospered as a highly productive Up-River Rice Plantation.

Louis LeConte dedicated himself to the aesthetic and botanical aspects of LeConte-Woodmanston as well as to its utilitarian productivity. He established there a Botanical and Floral Garden which became renowned throughout the United States and Europe. In this Garden he pioneered in the outdoor culture of the Camellia japonica. The other specialty of the Garden being an outstanding collection of some 30 specimens of bulb-type plants. In an article published in the November 22, 1936 issue of The Savannah Morning News, Mr. George D. Lowe, a horticulturist of Brunswick, Georgia, wrote: "Unquestionably the LeConte Garden in River was the proving ground for plants that are now distributed all over the South."

After the death of Louis LeConte in 1838, his beloved Botanical and Floral Garden was almost totally neglected. LeConte-Woodmanston continued to produce rice through the year 1864. But then the depredations wrought by Sherman's Calvary and the general unrest which thereafter prevailed put a stop to rice culture there. The last of the LeContes, Mrs. Jane LeConte Harden, was forced to abandon Woodmanston and join her brothers, John and Joseph, in California in 1869.

Now all that remains as reminders of the Halcyon Days of LeConte-Woodmanston are a lone Camellia tree, a stand of old-fashioned pink Crepe Myrtles, and one very old Sabal Palmetto, which helped to mark the site of the Woodmanston Plantation House.

With support of Georgians and other interested individuals and groups, which this project certainly merits, The Garden Club of Georgia, and Trustees of the LeConte-Woodmanston Project, over a period of years will recreate a living shrine of significant beauty and interest at the LeConte-Woodmanston Site, which will be a continuing source of justifiable pride for all.

Black, Nellie Peters, 1851-1919.

Nellie Peters Black papers, 1875-1920.

9.5 linear ft.

Arranged by record type.

Nellie Peters Black (1851-1919), clubwoman and owner and operator of the Richard Peters Stock Farm located in Calhoun, Georgia. Married George R. Black and resided in Calhoun (Gordon County), Sylvania (Screven County), and Atlanta, Georgia.

The collection consists of papers of Nellie Peters Black from 1875-1920. The collection primarily contains materials relating to Black's involvement in various organizations and in her stock farm. Includes records (1905-1928) relating to Black's position as secretary of the Women's Auxiliary of the Atlanta Archdeaconry of the Episcopal Church; programs (1906-1907, 1909-1911) of the Every Saturday Club (Atlanta, Ga.), a literary society; a scrapbook (1898-1911) containing correspondence, accounts, and newspaper clippings relating to her involvement in the Atlanta Free Kindergarten Association; and a scrapbook (1914-1915) documenting her role in establishing agricultural rallies through the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Other materials relating to Black include diaries of a trip to Mexico (1875) and two European tours (1904, 1906); speeches, newspaper clippings, and an extensive collection of photographs of the Peters and Black families.

The papers include the manuscript and galley proofs of the reminiscences of her father, Richard Peters; some correspondence of her husband George R. Black; and account books (1897-1916) of the Richard Peters Stock Farm (Calhoun, Gordon County, Ga.). Also includes papers of her daughter Nita Black Rucker (1900-1940) mainly family correspondence and Rucker's writings about Cora Harris and Nellie Black Peters.

DESCRIPTION

Annie Laura Eve Blackshear (1875-1967), a native of Augusta, Ga., served for many years as illustrator for the Georgia State College of Agriculture Extension Service. A well-known artist and educator, Miss Blackshear founded the Athens Art Association, and served several times as president. She also served as president of the Georgia Art Teachers Association, vice president of the Association of Georgia Artists, and as auditor and Georgia sponser of the Southeastern Arts Association.

This collection consists mainly of her writings and the writings of others collected during her career with the College of Agriculture. Many pageants, plays, and skits written by Miss Blackshear are present, along with numerous reports and the typescripts of some radio broadcasts made by Miss Blackshear. Topics include art, history, flower arrangement and holiday festivities. A few articles of correspondence, newspaper clippings, pictures, programs and printed material, mostly related to her work, are also included in the collection. Some paintings are present including a self-portrait of the artist.

Bloemer, Alphonse.

Alphonse Bloemer papers, 1918.

4 items.

Alphonse "Al" Bloemer (1896-1980), served with Company B of the 107th Engineers in the United States Army Corps of Engineers in France during World War I, born in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The collection consists of a diary of Alphonse Bloemer of the 107th Engineers, Company B during World War I, from January 14, 1918 - November 19, 1918. The diary details Bloemer's trip from Camp MacArthur, Texas to New Jersey; sea journey on the U.S. Aeolus from New Jersey to his arrival in Brest, France (February 15); and his work while in France--building barracks, stables, hospitals, and roads. Bloemer spent only a brief time at the front, however a few entries discuss seeing shell shock cases and men killed in battle. Bloemer composed an entry for each day's events and one entry for the week giving his overall impression of the week's events, the locale, or people. The collection also contains two photographs of the 107th Engineers and a cartoon book by Private Abian A. Wallgreen reprinted from the "Stars and Stripes."

PRELIMINARY DESCRIPTION

Carbon copy of a typewritten letter from: Boardman, Mabel
To: Hon. John J. Fitzgerald, H. of Reps., Washington, D.C.
Dated: Pointe-au-Pie, Province of Canada, Quebec, Can., July 29, 1916.
Re: a proposed memorial tablet to Clara Barton's memory to be placed in Memorial Bldg. to heroic women of Civil War. Miss Boardman states that the Executive Committee is opposed to such a move for 2 reasons, one: that Dorothea Dix rendered the greatest service of any individual woman in that war, whereas Miss Barton's name was not mentioned, and second: Miss Barton misused funds of the American Red Cross while she was president. Miss Boardman states the Red Cross has proof of such misuse.

Marion Colley Boyd papers, 1915-1948 (bulk 1915-1917).

1 linear ft.

Marion Colley Boyd, journalist and political and social reformer, resided in Washington, Georgia.

The collection consists of papers of Marion Colley Boyd from 1915-1948. Includes correspondence, newspaper clippings, and printed material. The collection centers upon her early (1915-1917) activities with the woman's suffrage movement in Georgia and New York, her work with the League of Women Voters of Georgia, and the Democratic Party. Also includes material relating to her service as a delegate to the 1924 Democratic National convention in New York and her role in the controversy over the adoption of the "Klan plank" by the convention.

DESCRIPTION

Written in response to orders from Mrs. John McIntosh Kell, Charles E. Boynton, partner in the Atlanta mercantile firm of Chamberlin, Boynton and Company (later to become a fixture in the Atlanta business community as Chamberlin-Johnson), answers her inquiries. The letters chiefly pertain to cloth samples, styles and notions.
